Bankers Prepared To Cooperate In Recovery Drive

CONVENTION OPENS TODAY IN CAPITAL

President of Association in Annual Address in Support of Roosevelt

EAGER TO MAKE LOANS

Frances Law Declares Business Probably Better Than Sentiment Today

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—(UP)—The nation's bankers are prepared to cooperate with President Roosevelt in a permanent recovery program based upon "Liberal, sound business doctrine and rational humanitarianism," Frances M. Law, president of the American Bankers' Assn., said today.

Speaking before the American Bankers' Association convention, Law, in his annual message, said that bankers' efforts the last year had been aimed at constructive principles instead of political criticism of the New Deal.

"All of us want to help the other fellow," Law said. "Bankers in common with other thoughtful and forward-looking businessmen, agree that sound, liberal business doctrine and rational humanitarianism should go hand in hand in any program of real and permanent recovery."

Recognize Need

Law said business felt the administration has recognized the "vital need of individual initiative and fair profit."

"There is hardly a sane banker in the country, who is not only willing, but eager to make good loans. Superabundance of bank credit is available but the demand for credit is distressingly low," Law added.

"It remains for business men to shake off their timidity and uncertainty and to indicate ability and willingness to borrow."

Law declared business probably is better than business sentiment.

"The record proves," he said, "that business men of this country have never been defeatists and it may be assumed that an employment increases and improvement is noted in the volume of business and in the expansion of credit, business men will increasingly regain confidence and nightmares will more and more become a thing of the past."

He emphasized the necessity of recapturing the nation's foreign trade to aid recovery.

Law praised the government's recent activity in promoting trade

LEGIONNAIRES ON PARADE: TO DEMAND BONUS

Business at Annual Convention Sidetracked Until Tomorrow

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Parade day at the American Legion National convention today brought a seemingly endless procession of veterans swarming down Biscayne boulevard.

The bonus question was lost temporarily in the glare of martial music, but it will be revived tomorrow on the convention floor where another controversy is anticipated.

Scores of resolutions demanding legislation that would cost the government almost $3,000,000,000—immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates—will be submitted to National Commander Edward A. Hayes at the opening of the first business session tomorrow morning.

The bonus question then will be open to discussion and "every man" who wants the floor will be recognized and heard, the commander said. Out of pre-convention

Australian Will Renew Trip Today

Kingsford-Smith Ready to Start Perilous Second Leg of Flight

SUVA, Fiji Islands, Wednesday, Oct. 24.—(UP)—Unless new storms develop over the south Pacific, Commander Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith was to start today on the most perilous phase of his Australia-to-California flight, the leg taking "The Lady of Southern Cross" from Suva to Honolulu, 2750 miles away.

Before retiring last night for a long rest in anticipation of a 22-hour unbroken flight, the Australian aviator and his flying companion, Capt. P. G. Taylor, set the takeoff time for noon today (4:30 p. m. Tuesday, PST.) They expect to reach Honolulu in 22 hours. From Honolulu to San Francisco is 2080 miles.

They will go into the air three hours earlier in moving the American-built monoplane from Albert Park 150 miles to the sandy beach at Naselai, which affords a longer runway for lifting the plane and the 500 gallons of gasoline which will be loaded at Naselai.

The fliers reacher here Sunday after a hard battle with storms along their course from Brisbane, Australia, the starting point of the first west-to-east flight ever attempted along this route. Further rains forced the delay here but clearing skies and a promising forecast for today indicated they probably can get away at the time now set.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH CONDEMNS WAR AS UN-CHRISTIAN; BIRTH CONTROL IS GIVEN APPROVAL

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Birth control was approved today by the Protestant Episcopal general convention.

Approval by the House of Deputies of a resolution endorsing dissemination of birth control information ended a day of upsets for conservative forces in the church.

Liberals today counted three other definite victories:

Condemnation of all war as un-Christian.

Creation of a church commission to fight for legislation that would exempt conscientious objectors to war from active fighting.

Election of four women to the National Council, first of their sex to sit in the governing body.

Women Elected

Those elected were Mrs. James R. Cain of Columbia, S. C.; Miss Eva D. Corey of Brookline, Mass.; Mrs. Rebekah Hibbard of Pasadena, Cal., and Miss Elizabeth Matthews of Glendale, O.

Birth control was approved, without its being named, as follows:

"We endorse the efforts now being made to secure for licensed physicians, hospitals and medical clinics freedom to convey such information as is in accord with the highest principles of eugenics and a more wholesome family life wherein parenthood may be undertaken with due respect for the health of the mother and the welfare of the children."

Proposals Submitted At Parley

Naval Conversations Are Opened in London; U. S. Delegates Sit in LONDON, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Japan's determination to denounce the Washington Naval treaty, with its 5-5-3 ratio between the United States, Great Britain and Japan, was conveyed to Great Britain today by Ambassador Tameo Matsudaira, a responsible Japanese authority said.

The announcement, he declared, was made at the opening of naval conversations here between Japan and Great Britain.

It was understood formal abrogation would be delayed pending developments in the London talks, but was regarded as ultimately inevitable.

Matsudaira and Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, in their remarks to the British today, refrained from specifying the exact tonnage tonnage envisaged for the naval powers.

Their statements described general Japanese policy without mentioning numbers of warships or figures on tonnage and calibers.

The American delegation headed by Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, will join the conversations later.

The Japanese met the British at No. 10 Downing street, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's official residence, at 10:30 a. m. The meeting was adjourned at 12:15 p. m. Several cabinet ministers arrived after the meeting, indicating an immediate cabinet meeting.

British quarters said, as a result of the meeting, that there was no reason to doubt that the next formal naval conference would be held according to schedule next year.

At today's meeting, after the Japanese orally presented the rough summary of the plan was discussed briefly by both delegations. Ambassador Tameo Matsudaira and Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto led discussion for Japan.

STRATOSPHERE BALLOON TRIP ENDS SUDDENLY

Gas Bag Ascends 10 Miles Before Making Forced Landing in Ohio

CADIZ, O., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Prof. Jean Piccard and his wife, Jeannette, first woman to pilot a balloon into the stratosphere, made a rough forced landing on a densely wooded hillside near here today after ascending "about 10 miles" into the upper air.

Both the scientist and his wife escaped injury in landing, but because the flight was cut short.

The Gondola, suspended from a huge gas bag, settled rapidly to earth in a gully at Fulton's woods, about two miles from Cadiz when the failure of sunlight to penetrate the ceiling caused the bag to lose buoyancy.

The balloon came down through the trees which made the landing easier and probably prevented damage to the scientific instruments.

The Piccards had taken off from Ford airport in Dearborn early today on a scientific flight during which they did not expect to equal the record of the Soviet balloonists who ascended more than 12 miles.

Mrs. Piccard surveying the balloon after the rapid descent of the craft, was disappointed keenly at what she termed "a mess."

"Oh, dear, I wanted to land on the White House lawn," were her first words to the United States.

BRITISHERS TAKE FIRST IN CLASSIC

Turner and Pangborn Have Chance to Win Second Honors Over Dutchmen

ALL RECORDS BROKEN

Winning Plane Completes 11,000 Mile Flight in Less Than Three Days

MELBOURNE, Australia, Wednesday, Oct. 24.—The American-built Dutch passenger plane piloted by K. D. Parmentier, pressing for second place to C. W. A. Scott and T. Campbell Black in the great England-Australia air race, was forced to land today 162 miles short of its goal.

After flying more than 11,000 miles over sea and desert from England, the Dutch fliers lost their bearings in northern Victoria in the darkness.

They circled around Albury and other towns. Finally they landed at Albury, on the Victoria-New South Wales border.

It was believed they would spend the remainder of the night there. The American plane of Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn was pushing on across Australia from Darwin, and was conceded a chance to beat the Dutch plane for second place.

Still Have Chance

If Turner and Pangborn win second place, however, it is likely to be after a close and exciting finish. Unless the Dutch plane waits until dawn, fliers here believed the Americans had little chance of catching up.

Both planes are eligible for second place in the speed section of the race, carrying a prize of $8,000.

Scott and Black won $40,000 first prize in the speed section in the amazing time of 71 hours and 13 seconds, just under three days, compared to the previous record of more than six days. The normal steamer time is five weeks.

The Parmentier plane, however, also covered itself with glory. It is a regular passenger transport, carrying a pay load of three passengers and mail, in addition to a crew of four. The Scott-Black plane is built for speed only.

Britishers Win

Two veteran British aviators slept today like men half dead after the greatest airplane speed race victory ever won, while two trailing planes, Dutch and American, followed them across the Australian continent.

The victorious De Havilland Comet of C. W. A. Scott and T. Campbell Black, the American built Dutch "Flying Hotel," and the American Boeing transport of Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, all had shattered by days the England-Australia flight record.

The Dutch plane—an American Douglas Air liner—left Charlieville, last compulsory halt, 131 miles from Melbourne, at 7:40 p. m. yesterday Melbourne time 4:40 a. m. today (EST).

At 6:41 p. m. Melbourne time (3:41 a. m. EST) Turner and Pangborn left Darwin, 1,339 miles from Charlieville and 2176 miles from Melbourne.

ELLEN M'ADOO TO MARRY SINGER

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23.—(UP)—No date has been set for the wedding of Ellen Wilson McAdoo, 19, daughter of U. S. Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, and Rafael Lopez de Onate of Hollywood, it was announced today by the bride-to-be's mother.

Mrs. McAdoo, divorced wife of the senator, said the wedding would be in "the near future."

The couple obtained a marriage license at Riverside yesterday, immediately returning to Los Angeles. De Onate, 35, is prominent in local society and well known as a singer.

DEALERS IN AUTOS MUST PAY DRIVERS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Two Los Angeles automobile dealers who got men in other states to drive new and second-hand cars here for resale were required yesterday by Donald Renshaw, California national recovery administration executive, to pay 14 such drivers $30 each for the driving services.

Renshaw said the dealers did not pay the men anything for the services, in violation of the code, and requested all such drivers to report to NRA headquarters, 751 South Figueroa street and efforts will be made to collect pay for them.

Renshaw said Los Angeles county has been receiving 1000 indigents a month by this practice.

FRUIT SHIPPERS IN VICTORY OVER AAA

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23.—(UP)—The firm of Mefford Brothers, Exeter, Cal., fruit shippers, won victory today in the first round of a court fight to prevent the AAA from interfering with its intrastate business.

Federal Judge George Cosgrave granted the firm a temporary injunction on the ground it was up to the court to determine if the shipping business was confined to the state. The concern had claimed the AAA had no authority to meddle in intrastate shipping.

The government charged the concern on several occasions had shipped oranges outside the state.

MRS. ROBINSON IN PLEA TODAY OF NOT GUILTY

Wife of Fugitive Kidnap Arraigned and Trial is Set for Oct. 29

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Mrs. Frances Robinson, wife of the fugitive kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, pleaded not guilty to participating in the crime when she was arraigned today before Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson.

Her trial was set tentatively for October 29.

The defendant, mother of a three-year-old boy, is one of three persons indicted on charges of kidnapping Mrs. Stoll October 10.

Thomas H. Robinson Jr., the actual kidnaper, has eluded a government hunt leading to the Atlantic seaboard.

Robinson's father, Thomas H. Robinson sr., is under arrest in Nashville, Tenn. It was to his home that the $50,000 ransom money paid by the victim's millionaire husband was sent.

Mrs. Robinson appeared tired and haggard when she was brought into Judge Dawson's court for the brief arraignment. She wore a black crepe dress with a white satin collar and a tan sport coat.

Her attorney, Clem W. Huggins, waived the reading of the indictment and said that he would be prepared to place his client's fate before a jury within a few days after the trial date.

He repeated that "under no circumstances will I defend Robinson in the event of his capture."

After her plea of not guilty Mrs. Robinson was returned to the women's quarters in the Liberty street jail where she has been held in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Thomas J. Sparks, United States district attorney, said that Mrs. Stoll would be the government's principal witness against Mrs. Robinson.

CROWDS FLOCK TO VIEW BODY OF PRETTY BOY

State and Government Officials Fight for Custody of Aide

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Surprisingly youthful department of justice agents wearing big grins and carrying long black violin cases—trooped out of the Travelers hotel today looking for all the world like an orchestra that had finished playing music for a winning football team.

The uniformed crowd did not divide that the black cases contained Thompson sub-machine guns which a few hours before had ended the career of Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd.

In the notebooks of the federal agents a black line was drawn through another name. The job of the D. J. men was done. That of Undertaker E. G. Sturgis was just beginning.

Thousands of countrymen jammed into his little mortuary. They came to take a peek at the Pretty Boy, peacefully composed with a hint of a smile at the corners of the full-tipped mouth.

Plea Ignored

The plea of Mrs. Walter Floyd mother of the slain bandit, that no one be allowed to look at or take pictures of the body went unheeded. Chief of Police Hugh McDermott, to whom the appeals were addressed, took no action to prevent photographers from snapping pictures.

As Floyd lay on his back yesterday atop the hill behind Mrs. Ellen Conkle's farm home—the goldenrod and broomrape red with the blood from his wounds—he looked into the eyes of the men who had brought him down. Dying, he had for them only that which he had while he lived—a curse.

Two southerners—both killers, but in a different way—looked each other in the eye. Floyd Georgie-born, Oklahoma-reared, a murderer. Melvin Purvis, slight

PRESIDENT APPEALS FOR AID TO NEEDY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—(UP)—President Roosevelt presented today to citizens an appeal to share with the government the terrific burdens of relief.

The appeal was made in the opening of the annual community chest drive under the direction of the 1934 mobilization for human needs.

The president called attention to the unusual relief burdens being borne by government, both local and national—"a load so heavy that every good citizen should seek to lighten it in every way possible."

"This effort on governments of all kinds to bear their share of the emergency needs," he said, "proceeds very clearly on the assumption that the total amount of relief of human needs, heretofore borne by private contributions will continue in the future at least at the same pace and in the same amount as in the past."

HAUPTMAN ENTERS PLEA ON WEDNESDAY

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann will make his first New Jersey courtroom appearance tomorrow when he will plead to the indictment charging him with the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr.

That he will plead not guilty is a foregone conclusion. Date for the trial probably will be set three weeks hence but James M. Fawcett, Hauptmann's counsel, said he would ask that it be put over until December 11, when a new court term convenes. The new term would call for a new panel of jurors. It also would give the defense more time to prepare.

EUGENE BLACK TO VISIT CALIFORNIA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Eugene R. Black, "contact man" between the administration and the banks, said today he would make a Pacific coast tour soon to "sell" the administration to the banks in that region.

Among the cities which Black probably will visit are San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Tacoma, San Diego and Portland.

He said he would return to Atlanta by way of the southwest, visiting banks en route, including those at Dallas and Houston.

Black reported continued support of the administration's credit expansion program on the part of banks in various parts of the country.

INJUNCTION SOUGHT BY VOTERS IN L. A.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Five Los Angeles county petitioners sought through the state supreme court today to restrain the county superior court from striking their names, and incidentally those of 24,000 other voters, from the county election rolls.

The suit was filed by Attorney John C. Fackard representing Charles Pierce, Ernest Arthur, Frank A. Bacey, Corintha Devault and Harry S. Owen.

They claimed that no affidavits or other legal grounds had been produced to support the removal of their names from the voters' register. They claimed further they had not been served properly with notice of the action and would have no opportunity to defend themselves. They suggested that the voters in question could be challenged at the polls in event their registration was questioned.

WEALTHY CHICAGOAN ACCUSED IN MURDER

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Irving Weitzman, wealthy head of a chain of Chicago bakeries and brother of Louis Weitzman, New York advertising executive, was held today without bond on a charge of causing the murder last March of Eli Dalches, then head of the company which Louis Weitzman now controls.

The suspect was arraigned yesterday and held for a hearing November 9. He is accused of hiring two gangsters, who police say have confessed, to kill Dalches, whose $300,000 insurance would have gone to Louis Weitzman through his advertising agency. "Dalches" widow had not intervened. Payment of the policies was stopped by a court order.

Both the men said to have accused Weitzman were reported to have appeared yesterday before a grand jury.

SEEK TO RESTORE OIL FIELD ORDER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Government and capital sought today, on widely separated fronts, to restore order to the oil industry, which faces a grave crisis.

The oil industry planning and coordination committee met here to discuss the shattered gasoline price structure, while a small army of federal agents in the east Texas oil fields made a herculean effort to halt the flow of illegal oil.

Retail gasoline price wars and "hot oil" dumping have combined to throw the industry into chaos. The government has cast all of its chips into the east Texas drive, believing that if distribution of illegal oil is curbed, the fight will be won.

It appeared that leaders of the oil industry were divided hopelessly regarding methods to meet the crisis. There was continued talk of slashing the price of crude oil, and of "pegging" gasoline prices.

LATE NEWS FLASHES

HAVANA, Cuba, Oct. 23.—(UP)—The naval and secret services frustrated today what they termed a plot to kill Jefferson Caffery, United States ambassador. They arrested three youths with sawed-off shotguns in an automobile in midtown.

SUVA, Fiji Islands, Oct. 24.—(Wednesday)—(UP)—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and Capt. P. G. Taylor took off here today for Naselai at the end of this island where they will take on gasoline preparatory for the hop to Honolulu on the second leg of a flight to the United States.

CHARLEVILLE, Australia, Wednesday, Oct. 24.—(UP)—Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, after losing their bearings in the England-Australia air race, arrived here at 6:05 a. m. today (3:05 p. m. EST Tuesday).

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 23.—(UP)—E. O. Thompson, member of the state railroad commission, announced today that an order was being prepared for closing down all oil fields in Texas.

RESTORED DOG TO APPEAR IN FILMS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 23.—(UP)—"Lazarus," the dog that was restored to life by Dr. Robert Cornish, University of California scientist, is going to appear in motion pictures, Universal studio announced today.

The entire experiment in which Cornish resuscitated the animal after it ceased breathing has been filmed and will be shown to film fans in a picture entitled, "Life Returns."

The picture itself revolves around the life of Cornish, whose remarkable experiments on Lazarus have become world famous. Onslow Stevens, Louis Wilson, George Breakston and Valerie Hobson will fill the principal roles.

According to the studio, the photographic and sound record of the experiment was made originally for scientific records alone but was sold to finance Cornish on later work.

soft-spoken Carolinian, whose job is to kill—if need be—for society.

Purvis Watches

Purvis watched John Dillinger die in a Chicago alley. Now he watched Floyd, for whom the Oklahoma national guard beat the brush without avail, die on an Ohio hillside.

He asked questions of the dying desperado, particularly about the Kansas City massacre of 1933 when Floyd's guns killed a federal agent. City police of the Midwest may have thought of Floyd in terms of a bank robber, but the men of the "D. J." thought of him in terms of Raymond Caffery.

Floyd said: "I'm dying, why the hell should I talk to you?" Other questions he answered with curses. Just before he died Purvis asked:

"You are Floyd, though, aren't you?"

"I'm Floyd."

That was the last Pretty Boy had to say.

In Controversy

The federal government and Wellsville, O., disputed over custody of one of the alleged participants in the Kansas City Union station massacre while through came here to view the bullet-punctured body of Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, notorious bandit and killer.

A resolution urging adherence to the World Court was offered by the Rev. Elmore D. McKee, Buffalo, but was defeated by a chorus of "noes."

John H. Peltz, chief of police of Wellsville, a small town near here, steadfastly refused to surrender Adam Richetti, Floyd's lieutenant, despite the pleas of Melvin Purvis, head of the department of justice Chicago office, and Sheriff Thomas B. Bash of Kansas City, Mo.

Both Richetti and Floyd are accused of participating in the mass killing at the Kansas City Union station in which four officers and a federal prisoner lost their lives.

Floyd, shot down late yesterday on a farm near here, died denying to Purvis that he took part in the massacre. An inquest showed three bullets from the guns of federal agents and police hit him. One entered his right arm and two penetrated his right side. One of these touched his heart. All were slugs from .45 calibre pistols.

Richetti, still ignorant of his chief's death, maintained that Floyd had not been with him when he was captured Saturday. He and Floyd engaged in a gun battle with Chief Peltz and members of the Wellsville police. One policeman was wounded slightly.

SONORA, Oct. 23.—(To the Editor of The Register.) Walked into a barber shop in this beautiful and historical little mountain town. I heard the radio going and somebody raising Old Ned with somebody. ## FRANCHISE TAX OF $4277 PAID BY PHONE FIRM

A check for $4277.25, representing two per cent of the gross income in Santa Ana of the Southern California Telephone company during the past year, was received and accepted by the city council last night.

The payment was in accordance with the franchise ordinance of the city requiring a two per cent tax for the use, operation and possession of a franchise. The percentage is based on gross income in this district and covers the period from October 15, 1933 to October 15, 1934. Last year, the check was for $5038.

The city council was informed that the franchise tax amount had been approved and checked by the state railroad commission and there was little need or opportunity to make a personal investigation of the matter.

DUTCH PLANE FORCED DOWN IN LONG RACE

the England-Melbourne race from the Dutch East Indies to continental Europe were 12 other planes, still struggling to complete the 11,300-mile air line course.

Black with grime, staggering with fatigue, Scott and Black climbed from their bullet-like Comet plane at 3:34:48 p. m. yesterday (12:34 a. m. today EST), winners of first place of $40,000 and $2000 gold cup in the speed section of the Mil-denhall-Melbourne race.

They had made a weekend trip of a flight half way around the world with an official elapsed time of 71 hours 18 seconds—59 minutes and 42 seconds short of three days—since they left Mil-denhall at 6:45:30 a. m. Greenwich mean time (1:34:30 a. m. EST) Saturday.

Prisoner Unruly After Arrest On Liquor Charge

Reported by officers to be one of the most pugnacious and unruly persons arrested here in many months, George T. McDonald, 40, 116 East Walnut street, was jailed last night for driving while under the influence of liquor, a misdemeanor, following a wreck at Second and Birch streets.

McDonald's car crashed into the rear of the parked machine of Mrs. Otto Schroeder, 410 West Fourth street, and pushed it for 60 feet. Mrs. Schroeder, sitting in the machine, was not hurt. McDonald was taken to the police station with difficulty and pronounced intoxicated to a marked degree and unfit to drive a car by a physician.

Officers Harry Pritchard and A. L. Steward booked him at the county jail at 11:15 p. m.

BANKERS READY TO COOPERATE FOR RECOVERY

agreements, saying the first efforts appeared "quite successful." Already foreign trade has shown some improvement with the notable exception of cotton, which shows a substantial decrease, he said.

"Restoration of America's world trade and the return of private initiative into active operation will end the depression."

He denied that banks had failed to lend freely thereby halting recovery as alleged by critics.

Law said bankers, generally, indorsed the recent address by Donald R. Richberg, director of the federal budget must be "balanced at the earliest possible moment" and remarks by President Roosevelt endorsing the "driving power of individual initiative and the incentive of fair profit."

Law asserted that banks have given more than "lip service" in their faith in the nation's future.

"There is no better investment in the world than securities of the United States government," he declared. "The record shows that government securities held by banks have increased over $7,000,000,000 since December 1929. During this period, the national debt has increased some $10,000,000,000 and it will be seen that 70 per cent of this increase was provided by the banks."

Returning to recovery efforts, Law said the depression is not over but great progress to end it has been made.

"We may approve emergency measures and expenditures, which otherwise we might not countenance," Law declared. "Approval of them is warranted on the basis that many of them are temporary in nature, and temporary only."

"Many of these measures and expenditures will be and should be eliminated when the emergency passes. No group of them in all the country more earnestly desires recovery than the bankers, and as a group, we assert unshakable faith that the natural forces of the country, in themselves, will in due time bring about a full and complete measure of recovery."

The "forces of destruction have been gallantly challenged" in both the United States and Great Britain, and Law warned that the country was in "no mood" to tolerate a "do-nothing program."

COMMUNISM TO BE LEGION MEET TOPIC

Jack Fisher chapter, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, will join with Santa Ana American Legion post No. 131 in a meeting Thursday night at 8 o'clock when James Davisk, chief of police of Los Angeles, will discuss the subject, "Communism." It was announced today by Bert Castex, commander of the Legion post.

A short business session will be staged by the Legion just preceding the address, Commander Castex announced, and following the talk Keim's orchestra will play music for a dance which will be free and open to the public, as will the address.

The Legion is planning to start a series of Saturday night dances in November.

Ask Change In Location For Revival Tent

Changing the location of proposed revival meetings to First and Orange streets, six Orange county pastors last night secured permission to conduct the tent meetings until December 31 with a second application made to the city council.

The ministers sent an application to the council last week but specified a location at South Syracuse and Wilshire streets. The request was taken under advisement for one week but the change in location was made without the knowledge of the councilmen.

A petition signed by 12 property owners in the vicinity of the revival grounds was sent with the application to show an absence of protest. H. W. Rusthou, manager of the revival, wrote the letter to the council, which was signed by the Rev. C. D. Hicks, D. F. Myers, J. C. Green, Wesley Norgaard, James Chalupnik and Frank E. Roubal.

Local and national awards of rugs, automobiles and cash were announced today by Chandler's Furniture store, dealers for Congoleum gold seal rugs, in a contest which closes November 6.

The Mickey Mouse Answer contest requires a sentence of 20 words or less telling what the gold seal stands for. Three rugs will be given away by Chandler's and the winning slogan will be entered in the national contest, where the five winners will receive new Ford V-8 automobiles, or $500 in cash. National prizes will be announced about December 20.

Entry blanks for the contest and further details may be secured from the Chandler store at Third and Main streets.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH CONDEMNS WAR AS UN-CHRISTIAN; BIRTH CONTROL IS GIVEN APPROVAL

Most sweeping of these was adoption of a resolution declaring "an unremitting war on war," and affirming "war as a method is settling international disputes is incompatible with the teaching and example of our Lord, Jesus Christ."

The committee's endorsement of old age and unemployment insurance had been qualified with the statement "the only open question concerns not whether but how such a provision shall be made."

This was rejected and a substitute offered by Mr. Melish was adopted which definitely endorsed "social insurance against the hazards of old age, illness and unemployment as a Christian principle."

Industrial Problem
A measure offered by Mr. Melish proposing "industrial partnership" should recognize that the investment by a worker of his life in industry should entitle him to equal consideration with those who invest capital" also was defeated.

Indorsement of a measure asking that conscientious objectors of every faith be accorded the status of Quakers in time of war was obtained only after lively debate.

Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of New York, was accused at today's session of undertaking "to unhinge great bodies of Protestant Christendom who have failed to hold his ideas as to the divinity of the episcopate."

This was set forth in a resolution offered by Roswell Page of Beaver Dam, Va., a lay delegate to the House of Deputies.

The resolution, which was tabled, referred to a sermon preached by Bishop Manning yesterday in which he defined the Protestant Episcopal Church as "fundamentally and definitely Catholic."

ELECTION OF LEACH URGED BY ATTORNEY

Speaking in favor of Hunter Leach, candidate for constable of Santa Ana Township, Charles Swanner last night enumerated the qualities needed in that position.

In a radio talk over station KREG, in a radio talk over station KREG, stating in his belief that the candidate was a man of high ideals, faithful to his obligations and honest in his personal and official transactions.

Swanner stated that the office of constable was a law enforcement office, having the same duties and responsibilities in the township that the sheriff's office does in the county.

The candidate elected to such office should be a man experienced in law enforcement work and trained in performing the duties prescribed by the law for such office," he said.

The speaker outlined Leach's public record, stating that since 1923 he had been actively engaged in public work in the county, from 1923 to 1927 in the post office department here, from 1927 to 1931 as deputy jailer of Orange county, and from 1931 to date as deputy constable. He also outlined his war record and personal qualifications for the position.

Stating that since there were no particular issues involved in the constable's office that personal qualifications for the post should be considered mainly, Swanner urged the opinion of any attorney or group of attorneys in Santa Ana be sought in regard to Leach's qualifications for the position.

LEGIONNAIRES ON PARADE: TO DEMAND BONUS

tion bonus discussions yesterday came an address that may mean the Legion will favor early, but not immediate, payment.

This was the plan advocated by Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, who was introduced as the man who would make known the Legion's views on the controversy.

Veterans interpreted the senator's address, which had the pre-delivery sanction of Legion leaders, as an advance tip-off on the bonus recommendations to be delivered tomorrow night by the resolutions or legislative committee.

Stelwer counseled moderation in bonus demands by able-bodied men for strategic reasons. He pointed out that a request for "early payment," when the bonus would "place a minimum burden upon the taxpayers" would increase the Legion's prestige, "and probably would be equally effective in securing favorable action in congress as an outright demand for immediate cash payments."

The senator said he held no brief for those who raise the issue that the government cannot pay the bonus now because its first duty was toward the poor and underprivileged. This was interpreted as an answer to President Roosevelt's speech last week in which he established this premise.

Slightly less than half of the 126,000,000 people in this country are church members.

BIRDS LEAVE NOTED MISSION ON SCHEDULE

Today is Ascension Day, and the famous swallows of San Juan Capistrano Mission, faithful to their custom, have left the mission. They have been leaving for days, Father Hutchinson of the mission says, and this morning not one was left.

For years the swallows have arrived at the mission in the spring, on St. Joseph's Day, March 19, and set about building their nests in the old gardens. Every year on St. Joseph's Day they leave.

This year observers were not so sure the old custom would be observed, as the birds had been acting queerly all through the summer. The swallows appeared as usual on March 19, although not in as great numbers as usual, and contrary to custom many of them left during the summer, only to reappear later.

According to tradition, on March 19, 19 scouts, in the van of the bird army appeared and circled the mission, but the birds were slow in coming this year, and slow in building their homes. They seemed unhappy, and Father Hutchinson said they missed the presence of their friend and protector, Monsignor St. John O'Sullivan, who spent years in rebuilding the mission.

The body of Father O'Sullivan soon will be moved to a tomb in the mission gardens he loved so well. Father Hutchinson said, word from the bishop of this diocese being all that is awaited.

PORTER TO ADDRESS BOURBON MEETING

"T. N. T." Porter of Los Angeles, representing the State Democratic committee and campaign headquarters is speaking tonight in the Temple theater in company with other speakers at a meeting which will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

The subject will be "The Real Issues Involved in This Campaign." He is a dynamic speaker according to Harry S. Gerhart, Democratic campaign manager for Orange county, and will explain "why the various false and side-track issues have been raised to keep the public mind off the main issues."

Porter will speak over KREG at 8:30 o'clock with a stirring appeal to American freedom of expression in speech, and the solution of economic problems by the ballot, according to the campaign headquarters announcement.

One Parsnip Enough For Family

There isn't any way to determine a parsnip growing champion but W. J. Storm, 112 East Edinger street, would be a front rank contender if such a contest was held.

Storm came to the Register office today with a giant parsnip that measured two feet in length and weighed three pounds. It had been grown in a small patch of other parsnips, many of which were also large. The top of the big one was four inches in diameter.

REPUBLICAN CLUB DIRECTS EFFORT TO VOTE GETTING

The Orange County Republican club will throw aside all business except that of getting out the vote on election day, it decided at a meeting here last night, passing a resolution to that effect.

In session at Republican headquarters, the club voted to hold no more meetings between now and election day, in order to devote its entire time and attention to cooperating with the Republican County Central Committee in getting out the vote.

It was also decided to sponsor two or three radio talks advocating the election of the Republican state ticket. No dates or speakers have been arranged.

On election day, each member of the club will be expected to report with his car for service in carrying voters to the polls. It was announced.

Girl Hiker Is Apprehended Here

A 15-year-old Washington girl successfully "bummed" her way as far as Santa Ana but hitchhiked her way right into the police station yesterday, and was turned over to probation authorities by police.

The runaway girl was attempting to secure a ride from passing motorists at First and Main streets yesterday afternoon when Officer C. E. Neer drove up in his private car on his way to work. He was very accommodating in stopping for the hitch-hiker but stopped again at the police station.

The girl was defiant at first and refused to answer questions, but finally admitted she was Stella Faught, from Everett, Washington, and had run away from a county home there. Because of an illness she had contracted during her trip, she was turned over to probation authorities for hospital treatment.

Seek Action By Board On Flood Work

FULLERTON, Oct. 23.—Plans for flood control work in Fullerton were discussed at a meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce office last night, decision being reached to request the city council to make a survey of the existing natural drainage lines so that a definite plan of control may be worked out.

The meeting was sponsored by the chamber and those present included men who had previously considered an independent flood control movement in Northern Orange county. In a long discussion, the opinion was expressed that unless the reported deadlock on the county plan is broken, Northern Orange county will have to take action to secure flood control and water conservation.

A. B. Hillabold, president of the chamber, presided.

CONTEST OVER WILKIE CLAIMS COUNCIL POST MIRAGE RAISED IS RULED OUT BY OPPONENTS

The election contest brought by William Haun, defeated councilmanic candidate at Newport Beach last April 9, to unseat his successful opponent, Councilman Lloyd Claire, ran into a legal stone wall today in Superior Judge James L. Allen's court, where a non-suit was granted.

While ordinarily a non-suit leaves the way open for the filing of a new action, in this case no further proceedings can be taken, it was explained, because the time limit for filing such an election contest expired on October 9, six months after the election in question.

At today's hearing, Attorney Edgar L. Martin, representing Haun, found himself unable to get a judgment introduced to support his charge that Claire had violated the state election laws by hiring automobiles to carry voters to the polls on election day.

The only testimony available from J. D. Wiley, Malcolm D. Robertson, Charles Fowler, and Claire himself, was to the effect that no agreement had been made in advance of the election to pay for such service. The witnesses said that they had no dealings with Claire, that Frank Rinehart, of Newport Beach, had obtained their services.

Because no violation of the law occurs unless there has been an advance agreement for payment, Defense Counsel Stanley Reinhaus successfully objected to the introduction of any evidence as to payments. The plaintiff introduced a written statement by Robertson, which said that he had worked for election voters while they went to the polls and that after the election Claire handed him $3.50, saying "Here, Mack, is $3.50. You didn't work today." Claire referred to Robertson's regular employment as fisherman, it was stated.

Reinhaus made no objection to this statement, which he contended upheld the defense position that no advance agreements or payments had been made.

Attorney Martin also is acting as counsel for citizens who filed charges of election frauds in connection with the Newport Beach elections. D. H. Betten, friend of District Attorney S. B. Kaufman, and said to have been engaged by the district attorney to investigate the fraud charges, was with Martin in court today.

Warner Named To Municipal Study Project Group

Mayor E. G. Warner was named by the city council last night to represent Santa Ana on a committee of city officials in Orange county to consider the submission of a SERA project for a municipal survey of cities as a means of providing more employment for "white collar" workers.

The action was taken with the signing of a resolution sent to the council by Albert Launer, secretary of the Orange County League of Municipalities. The passing of the resolution named Warner to meet with the other city officials and draft the provisions of the project.

The work contemplated in the survey project includes an inventory of city equipment, study of the methods of fire protection, police protection, health supervision, assessing and other municipal functions; need for uniform city ordinances, and similar matters.

Local Briefs

County Clerk J. M. Backs yesterday mailed sample ballots to the 66,400 registered voters of the county, in preparation for the election November 6.

The county supervisors today appropriated $30,000 of county relief funds to the revolving fund of the County Emergency Relief committee, to replenish that fund for relief expenditures covering the past month.

Dr. John Wehrly, who underwent a major operation at St. Joseph's hospital, is reported to be recovering satisfactorily.

The training of young Chinese women for the work of church and missions will be described by Miss Ruth Brittain, dean of the Bible Seminary for Women at Shanghai, China, who will speak at the midweek meeting of Calvary church in the Ebell club auditorium, Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Gilbert M. Meisinger, 23, and Helen Marie Stauffer, 31, both of Santa Ana, and George W. Mackintosh, 51, of Newport Beach, and Dorothy McFarlane, 45, of Anaheim, have filed applications for marriage license in Riverside.

Wives of members of the Santa Ana Twenty-Third club will be honored guests at the regular weekly meeting scheduled for 6:30 o'clock tonight in La Casa Trabuco cafe, it was announced today.

Farm Advisor Harold E. Wahlberg, who recently underwent a major operation, is making a splendid recovery, according to word today from his offices in the courthouse annex. He returned last week from the hospital and now is convalescing at home. He expects to be back at his desk next Monday, but will not resume field work for another week or so, upon instructions from his physician.

the Los Angeles CWA under him as state director.

"Then there is the letter from Basil Thomson, head of Scotland Yard now," Wilkie said, "and from Spencer Eddy of the New York Intelligence Unit—but why go on? I dare them to try it."

"And while I'm speaking of dares, He's one, I challenge J. Frank Burke, publisher of the Santa Ana Register and supporter of Logan Jackson—I dare him to dig out of his files and print in his paper, the telegrams I know are resting there. They are replies to wires J. Frank Burke—Jackson's supporter—sent east, on the urgent demand of a Jackson supporter. Somebody was sure my record was bad. Mr. Burke was made the goal to the tune of the telegraphic cost. Back came a most complimentary tribute to me as a man, a civic worker and a citizen. They just couldn't believe it so they sent another and again came back still more complimentary statement. And then Mr. Burke quit wiring—and Jackson's supporters quit asking for wires. It hadn't worked."

Declaring that his opponents have built up a mirage comprised of false statements, fraudulent claims, etc., Capt. Don Wilkie former secret service operative, who now is candidate for sheriff of Orange county, spoke over KREG last night.

Wilkie said that his opponents have attacked him repeatedly as a person, while he has only attacked the record of the sheriff, although he "might climb the fence from the field of issues into the greener pastures of criticism of him," but would not do so.

The speaker claimed that Otto Jacobs, a lawyer, used his ability on time bought and paid for by Jackson, to "broadcast to you some half truths, innuendos and insinuations that I lied."

"The lie," Wilkie said, "was his claim that I have said or published or authorized the statement that I have spent 30 years in THE secret service. The truth is that I said that I had 30 years of intimacy with law enforcement."

The speaker devoted most of his talk to stating that charges concerning his record are false, and in going into detail regarding his record in the secret service and in other lines. He quoted previous statements he had made to show that he was connected with the Military Intelligence Reserve, although without full pay so that he could devote time to making his living as he could.

"The years I swore to jobs other than law enforcement," he said, "were years in which I had the right and did earn my living while so engaged. So, it would appear that the lie was cast against me, that the lie was cast against me."

Wilkie said an attempt is being planned to question his war record as a secret agent of the Naval Intelligence, for which position he was chosen because of his proven ability. He said the plan was to have a naval officer at a public meeting challenge the war record. He said this plan would fail because any naval official doing that would be subject to summary court martial and would fail because he (Wilkie) has obtained the statement from his old commander, Capt. Edward Macaulay, retired, that he did appoint him and he did such a good job that 16 years later Captain Macaulay again asked Wilkie to help by organizing and directing the Intelligence Unit of

GERARD GIVES TALK TONIGHT ON SALES AIDS

David C. Gerard, of the Institute of Personal Economics, will deliver an address on salesmanship tonight at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Willard junior high school. This address is the one which was postponed from last Wednesday night because of the heavy rains which made it practically impossible for business people to turn out.

Gerard is a specialist in his own field, with years of successful practical experience behind him. He has worked with business firms in 23 states and has helped train thousands of salesmen. He has conducted sales promotional campaigns for various industries, such as automobile merchandising, bakeries, laundries, dairies, refrigerators, oil companies, oil distributors and numerous others.

Gerard offers work of definite practical value, it was announced, and wherever he has operated has had a standing invitation to return. He is one of the few men in this field who have been able to simplify this subject and bring it within the grasp of the average salesman, it is said. Gerard talks right into the mark and has intense contempt for the usual humbug associated with the subject," the announcement says.

A number of calls from Santa Ana business men have been received by Gerard through The Register asking for consultations. The address tonight is the last of the series sponsored by The Register, the other two having been given by Oliver E. Behrmer, associate of Gerard. Gerard's talk tonight will be similar in substance to his regular convention address to salesmen and business organizations for which he receives a substantial fee. The Register makes it possible for everyone interested to hear the address without cost.

QUARANTINE AT ORANGE COUNTY HOSPITAL OFF

Quarantine for infantile paralysis was removed yesterday from the Orange county hospital, which has been isolated from public contact for several weeks, it was announced today by Dr. K. H. Sutherland, county health officer.

With only six cases of infantile paralysis remaining under quarantine in the hospital, and only one outside, the situation had improved so materially that health authorities felt safe in lifting the hospital quarantine, Dr. Sutherland said.

The only restriction remaining at the hospital is against visitors. Hospital attaches now are free to come and go as they wish. During the period of quarantine, nurses were restricted to the grounds, children were not admitted to the grounds, and only emergency surgery cases could pass the quarantine.

TOURIST CAMP OPERATORS SAY BUSINESS GOOD

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Operations of automobile camps on the great highways leading north and east through California, are almost boastful of their prosperity. They report business is better than ever.

Highways leading north to Oregon and Washington and east to Nevada and the midwest, bring their cargoes of tourists in to Sacramento via Del Paso boulevard. Gene Waldmann operates one of the larger camps on that thoroughfare.

"We are doing a record business," he reported when I visited his camp.

"We've been getting a fine class of people, better than in former years."

"There are quite a few stopping here who are seeking work in California. But it is notable that most of them have relatives here to care for them or have enough money to keep them going for a few months."

I talked with Ray Standerman, who had come from Gann valley, South Dakota. The drought had hurt him. So he had loaded his wife and three children into their small car, put their household effects on a trailer and headed for California.

He seemed to know little of California politics.

"Not many of the out of state people do," commented Waldmann. I went on to the camp of Ray E. Stewart. He said his cabins were filled every night. He attributed it to "more money—more people traveling" and considered it a sign of prosperity.

"We get lots of people from Oregon and Washington," he said. "Many of them are looking for work. But my observation has been that there are just about as many people from California going north to find jobs."

A. A. Wood, another camp operator, thought more hitch-hikers were on the road than ever before.

One of them came along. He proved to be John Bradley, one-time automobile mechanic of White Plains, New York.

"I came out to California because it was warmer here," he said. He seemed to know almost nothing about Upton Sinclair or the California campaign.

"We get lots of people from Oregon and Washington," he said. "Many of them are looking for work. But my observation has been that there are just about as many people from California going north to find jobs."

A. A. Wood, another camp operator, thought more hitch-hikers were on the road than ever before.

One of them came along. He proved to be John Bradley, one-time automobile mechanic of White Plains, New York.

"I came out to California because it was warmer here," he said. He seemed to know almost nothing about Upton Sinclair or the California campaign.

QUARANTINE AT ORANGE COUNTY HOSPITAL OFF

Quarantine for infantile paralysis was removed yesterday from the Orange county hospital, which has been isolated from public contact for several weeks, it was announced today by Dr. K. H. Sutherland, county health officer.

With only six cases of infantile paralysis remaining under quarantine in the hospital, and only one outside, the situation had improved so materially that health authorities felt safe in lifting the hospital quarantine, Dr. Sutherland said.

The only restriction remaining at the hospital is against visitors. Hospital attaches now are free to come and go as they wish. During the period of quarantine, nurses were restricted to the grounds, children were not admitted to the grounds, and only emergency surgery cases could pass the quarantine.

Beach, charged with issuing bank checks with intent to defraud, was jailed last night by Constable William Ponting of Newport Beach.

Charged with failure to pay wages, Harry Straw, 45, Santa Ana, was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff James Ragan and John Ryan and booked at the county jail.

Police News

Joe Pollak, 39, charged with conspiracy and William T. White, 29, charged with counterfeiting, were booked at the county jail yesterday by federal officers.

Emilio Rios, 48, La Habra, was booked at the county jail for vagrancy last night by Constable William Tremaine of La Habra.

TOURIST CAMP OPERATORS SAY BUSINESS GOOD

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Operations of automobile camps on the great highways leading north and east through California, are almost boastful of their prosperity. They report business is better than ever.

Highways leading north to Oregon and Washington and east to Nevada and the midwest, bring their cargoes of tourists in to Sacramento via Del Paso boulevard. Gene Waldmann operates one of the larger camps on that thoroughfare.

"We are doing a record business," he reported when I visited his camp.

"We've been getting a fine class of people, better than in former years."

"There are quite a few stopping here who are seeking work in California. But it is notable that most of them have relatives here to care for them or have enough money to keep them going for a few months."

I talked with Ray Standerman, who had come from Gann valley, South Dakota. The drought had hurt him. So he had loaded his wife and three children into their small car, put their household effects on a trailer and headed for California.

He seemed to know little of California politics.

"Not many of the out of state people do," commented Waldmann. I went on to the camp of Ray E. Stewart. He said his cabins were filled every night. He attributed it to "more money—more people traveling" and considered it a sign of prosperity.

"We get lots of people from Oregon and Washington," he said. "Many of them are looking for work. But my observation has been that there are just about as many people from California going north to find jobs."

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known. (Adv.)

STRATOSPHERE BALLOON TRIP ENDS SUDDENLY

Press correspondent who trailed the gondola to the woods. She referred to an earlier remark that she would like to land at Washington.

Although the bag was ripped in half a dozen places, the gondola and the valuable instruments housed in its interior were not believed to have been damaged.

The Piccards apparently were not in great danger at any time, although the balloon descended very rapidly.

The heavy ropes by which the gondola and the bag were attached were tangled in the trees of the hillside gully into which the balloon fell.

A dozen neighborhood youths, attracted to the scene, were impressed into service to gather up the valuable scientific paraphernalia of the flight under Piccard's direction.

Professor Piccard busied himself with the task of freeing the tangle of the ropes from the brush.

His wife described the flight briefly.

"I think we made some very valuable calibrations during the flight," she said.

"I was a little nervous at the take off for it was very bumpy. But when we got up into the upper air it became very calm."

"When we were above the ceiling the sun expanded the bag and gave us altitude. Over Ohio we were only about 2000 feet in the air. We started to come down, and broke through the ceiling where the sun did not penetrate. Hence we lost the lifting power of the warm days. We descended very rapidly, and I was kept busy throwing off ballast to keep us from going down any faster."

"I was much too busy to be nervous. But the whole thing was a mess."

When the gondola slid to earth along the hillside, the Piccards stepped out.

The professor's first thought was for his instruments; but his wife's first thought was for the turtle mascot, "Fleur De Lis." Not until she had assured herself that the turtle was safe would Mrs. Piccard discuss the flight.

The scene of the flight's termination was in a remote spot. Reporters who followed the progress of the balloon in automobiles as the craft passed southward from Michigan into north east Ohio were unable to drive closer than a mile from the landing place.

Searchers walked a mile through the woods from the main highway, thence up the gully to the hillside where the gondola had settled.

Mrs. Piccard showed no signs of strain. The professor declined to tell of his experiences until he had completed the work of severing the tangled ropes.

FORD AIRPORT, DEARBORN, Mich., Oct. 23.—(UP)—Prof. Jean Piccard and his wife, Jeannette, took off at 6:57 a. m. EST. today for the stratosphere and a study of the mysterious cosmic rays.

The balloon rose swiftly, drifting toward the east. Piccard himself dispatched the balloon by discharging dynamite caps in the four heavy cable-ropes which held it down.

As the 175 foot balloon started up, Edward J. Hill, Detroit balloonist in charge of the ground crew, shouted: "Goodbye and good luck, Jean and Jeannette."

Mrs. Piccard, only woman to hold a balloon pilot's license, waved at him.

Then the two Piccard children, Paul, 10, and Donald, 8, shouted: "Goodbye Mommy and Pappa." Their mother again waved.

Despite throwing out of ballast, the balloon settled toward earth. A dozen attendants rushed over, stopped the fall and started it upward again.

The huge gray bag drifted up with the wind, missed a 15-foot post at the eastern end of the field by a comfortable margin, then shot almost straight up.

It was out of sight within eight minutes, hidden behind heavy clouds.

KENNY LISTS BROTHERHOOD PLANKS FOR SAID POLITICAL HIS PLATFORM ORGANIZATION

Stating the planks of the platform on which he is running for office, Herbert F. Kenny, Democratic candidate for the assembly, last night told his audience in a radio talk over KREG that the prosperity of Orange county and California was dependent on the problem of distribution, more than any other one thing.

"I stand for production for use," he said. "That is, absorbing our surplus and putting it to work for those who need it." Kenny praised the work of the 20 cooperative groups in Orange county who he said are doing much in that direction at the present time.

Stating that Orange county prosperity in particular was bound up in the prosperity of the citrus fruit grower, Kenny said that distribution plans guaranteed to allow the fruit grower to realize a profit on his work were greatly needed. "It is essential," he said, "that government shall take a vital part in the development of markets and the provision of transportation for our crops and products. There should never be any surplus."

He stated his belief that the Townsend Old Age Pension plan was a greatly desirable thing in California, as it would bring many people into this state whose pension money would swell the volume of California business.

Stating that Orange county was faced with its greatest water shortage, Kenny said active legislation for water supply and flood control was needed. The answer to this problem, he said, lay in the need for dams and storage facilities in the county, and pledged himself to work to that end.

"We (the Democratic party) also favor a law against deficiency judgments on trust deeds, mortgages or other liens upon real property," he said. "Too much easy credit is at the root of all our present economic troubles."

Summing up his principles, Kenny said "I stand for public ownership of utilities, reduction of the interest rates you are now paying, security and protection for your homes and firesides, reorganizing and merging our systems of state

Having taken the position that efficiency and accomplishment make up the real basis for selecting public officials, District Attorney S. B. Kaufman last night read over KREG, letters indicating high regard in which the district attorney's office of Orange county is held by state officials and bodies. Kaufman also criticized certain methods that he said have been used in an attempt to defeat him, referring to the Orange County Brotherhood and the Orange County Council of Christian Citizens.

Kaufman read a letter in which Corporation Commissioner Edwin M. Daugherty said, "The record of your office in cases of this character (involving corporation cases) is very near the top in the total of convictions throughout the state."

He also read a letter from State Labor Commissioner Joseph I. Creem, signed by Leo Vanderlan, deputy, which commended the assistance and efficiency of Kaufman and his staff in handling violations of labor laws. "Settlement of these cases resulted in collection of thousands of dollars in wages which indirectly and directly benefitted Orange county and its citizens," the letter said.

Prosecution by Kaufman of Simon Mohr, one of "a gang of eyesight swindlers" was the subject of a letter of thanks from the State Board of Medical Examiners.

Kaufman quoted the grand jury report commending conduct of his office, and also a statement signed by 17 justices of the peace and police judges, which said that his office has been operated efficiently and impartially, and that it has extended cooperation to the law enforcement officers.

Oftentimes, the speaker said, organizations are formed which try to convince the public they should vote for certain candidates because they are endorsed by these organizations. "A purely political organization entitled the Orange and local government, and a more general application of the golden rule."

County Brotherhood, which has no official standing with the church brotherhood, was formed during the primary campaign, but no longer is heard of, Kaufman recalled. He warned his listeners not to be influenced by organization endorsements unless they know the organization.

Pointing out that he heartily agrees with the purposes of the Christian Citizenship Council to block return of the saloon, and support local option, Kaufman said, however, "that I do not believe such an organization should defeat its own ends by endorsement of any candidate."

Kaufman said he had been told that his opponent was active in the formation of this council, "though he never has been recognized as a dry leader." He also stated he had been advised by ministers and laymen that the council intends to endorse his opponent, but that since this has become a matter of common knowledge, one of the officers has severed connection with the organization. The president, Kaufman said he had been advised, "has stated definitely that he will resign as president, if the organization endorses any candidate, as he is not acting as president for political purposes," but for the purpose of bringing about local option.

Another occurrence of the primary campaign recalled by Kaufman was the endorsement of his opponent by Ralph J. Smedley, secretary of the Santa Ana Ministerial association and of the Y. M. C. A. Kaufman said he approves the work being done by the Y. M. C. A. and that his wife is a member of the Y. W. C. A. board. He pointed out, however, that this endorsement by Smedley as secretary of the Ministerial association was misleading, for the association itself in fact had endorsed no one. He was referring to an expression of confidence in McKinney by a group of church leaders.

His opponent, Kaufman recalled, had alleged that the county is controlled by a political ring, which he has not named. Kaufman said his opponent could not name a county with a cleaner record than this one, and that he himself did not believe the county's elective officers, past and present are part of any such clique.

During the first half of 1931, the Far East supplied the United States with 99 per cent of its raw jute, 49 per cent of its raw silk and crude rubber, 70 per cent of its tea, and 49 per cent of its cane sugar.

DRIVES HOME FACTS ABOUT D. A.'S OFFICE

Whether the district attorney thinks he is being insufficiently paid, is not important to the taxpayer in the present district attorney's campaign, said B. Z. McKinney, candidate for that office, in a radio speech last night.

The important point to the taxpayer, he added, is that the office can be filled as capably, with full attention to duties of the office and a saving of several thousand dollars annually to the taxpayer, by the elimination of private practice from the office.

With private practice eliminated, the work of the office could be handled with probably two less deputies and at least one less stenographer, said McKinney.

Pointing out that the district attorney had stated that his private practice was very negligible, but had "in the next breath" stated in effect that unless private practice were permitted in the office, neither he nor his deputies would care to keep their places, McKinney commented that, having been in the office for seven years, the district attorney probably was not aware that there has been a depression. The $250 salary of a deputy district attorney is equal to $400 net income in private practice outside of the office, because the county furnishes the district attorney and his deputies all "overhead" expenses of office, lights, telephones, stenographers, law library, etc.

Many Would Trade
Fully 40 or 50 lawyers of the county, at least as capable as the present deputies, would be willing to exchange places with them, even with private practice eliminated from the office, McKinney stated.

The district attorney had compared his own $3825 salary with the $6000 paid the district attorney of San Bernardino county, said McKinney, who pointed out that private practice is not permitted the district attorney in San Bernardino county, and although that is a larger county than Orange, the district attorney there has only three deputies, while the Orange county district attorney has five.

"My opponent's disparagement of my ability as an attorney and my law practice" said McKinney, referring to a recent radio talk by the district attorney, "has placed the issue on so personal a basis as to naturally tie my tongue. Modesty forbids me to discuss my accomplishments with the same frank boldness that marked my opponent's relation of his own brilliant qualities. I must leave to others the matter of correcting his statements."

"For my part, I prefer to talk about pertinent issues of the campaign. I have no criticism to make of my opponent's legal ability—I have said from the start that I conceded his ability. I have no contempt for his private law practice. I, as well as most of the other lawyers of this county, will concede that the district attorney's office has probably the largest private law practice in the county. It is that very fact that we deplore in the conduct of the office, for we believe that no private practice should be allowed in any public office."

Better Results
McKinney declared that it was the opinion of many attorneys that if private practice was barred from the district attorney's office, the removal of this interference with public duty would result in a better administration of the office, "and the people of this county will get better law enforcement."

The district attorney's excuse that "he took the system as he found it," is not an excuse, said McKinney. "If a thing is fundamentally wrong and economically unsound, is it justified merely by the fact that it has existed in the past?" he queried.

"Of course," he added, "you cannot blame him for not wanting to give up something so extremely profitable." The district attorney received from private probate fees alone a sum averaging $40 per month last year, aside from his other private practice, McKinney asserted. One deputy district attorney, he said, received more than $1500 from just one private client, in addition to his $200 monthly salary from the county. "One might wonder which is the side-line, the private or public job," McKinney commented.

By HARRY GRAINGER

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Fritz Grainger sees no need of an Eastern conference, and when you have met him you have a lot of silly regulations," says the Princeton coach. "I believe that the Western conference is somewhat overburdened with regulations. At the same time when it was formed there was a real need for some regulation."

"Princeton adopted two rugby plays—the lateral pass and the huddle. I don't believe you can get much rugby into football without making sacrifices in blocking. Rugby is a good conditioner, but players are apt to contract bad habits, such as tackling high and dropping the ball when they themselves are tackled."

"It might be advisable to widen the goal posts to eight feet and lower the cross bar to stimulate field goal kicking."

SOMEONE ITS SIZE

"I don't know whether this fall's Princeton schedule is too weak for the good of the squad or not. Two years ago we were playing practically the same schedule and every one was saying that it was too arduous."

Crisler neglects to mention that Michigan and Columbia decorated the 1932 schedule, and are replaced by lesser lights this trip.

It was this lessening of the Princeton load that caused Crisler to say that he doesn't know how good this season's Tiger is and won't know until it plays someone its size. And early indications are that there is no one Princeton's size on the schedule.

"I thought Williams was a good team, and I think we won mainly because we had more men," continues Crisler. "If we had played Williams with 11 men, it would have been pretty even."

"I rate the present first Princeton team two touchdowns stronger than the first relief detachment."

"I do not consider our line as good as it was in 1932. We miss Ceppi, Lane and Ken Fairman. We didn't get any such quantity of sophomore material this autumn as we did last."

"I am going to discontinue the practice of making 11-man substitutions."

CHICAGO TO PULL IN SLACK

Clark Shaughnessy asserts that the work of the Chicago line from tackle to tackle in the Michigan match was not what it will have to be if the Maroon is to come up to the Minnesota game unscaunted.

Chicago made no ground between its tackles, going around the ends for three touchdowns, with a pass setting the stage for a fourth. Defensively, the line was wobbly, Michigan making most of its gains on drives.

The mission of the Army coaching staff is continued development of reserves, to prevent overworking the first-string men, as it was forced to do last year. Plenty of tough football lies ahead of the Cadets, with three stiff skirmishes away from home against Yale, Illinois, and Harvard on successive Saturdays, and the windup with Notre Dame on Nov. 24.

RESERVES LION PROBLEM

Lou Little thought that against the Louisiana Military Institute, the Columbia team, as a whole, was 50 per cent below the form it showed the week previous when opposed to Yale. The reserve situation is particularly acute. The Lion ends failed to impress, and the blocking was way below par.

"Right now we are probably the best fumbling team in the Big Ten, but that's one title we don't want to win," declares Don Schmidt, of Ohio State.

And Bob Zuppke plays the Buckeyes a compliment by calling them the kind of team that will beat teams that beat Illinois.

Only in high schools is the new size of the ball noticeable. It helps boys with small hands to improve their passing.

Canvas Roof Added To County's Boxing Club

Come wind, rain or frost, the Orange County Athletic club is ready for Old Man Winter.

Opened last March 29 as an open-air arena on '101' Highway, and operated with the stars for a ceiling ever since, the establishment now has a hat—a $2800 canvas roof.

Construction work was completed today, meaning that a cozy and warm clubhouse will await O. C. A. clients Thursday night when boxing is resumed after a week's interruption because of rain.

The canvas-roof cost almost a thousand dollars more than a top of metal or some other material. The canvas, 1800 pounds of it, is suspended on cables and can be rolled to suit the fancy of the fans. It can be closed completely on cool winter evenings or opened wide hot summer nights. Not a post will obstruct the vision from anywhere in the arena, thanks to the cable arrangement.

Promoter Sam Sampson also is prepared to install a heating system when needed, but this feature may not be added for several weeks.

To celebrate the improvements, Matchmaker "Bud" Rutledge has lined up a gala card for Thursday night, composed of a double main event and 10 other bouts, two more than usual.

Jack Rockey of Long Beach and Paul Saucedo, the popular young Anaheim lightweight, collide in the windup, with Jo-Jo Veney and Walter Balz in the other half. Veney and Balz were to have tangled last week.

HAMAS, LASKY OUT AS BAER OPPONENTS

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 23.—(UP)—The heavyweight boxing title is hibernating with Max Baer for a long spell. While its possessor is being the film dandy in Hollywood and for a long time afterward it won't be placed in jeopardy.

One had the word today of Andy Hoffman, Baer's ringmaster, that the champion will confine his licks, if any, to non-title efforts until next June at least.

"And in the meantime," said Hoffman, "we hope somebody will come along who can put some money in the house."

Schmeling or Lasky? "They," scoffed Hoffman, "wouldn't draw water. Both beaten. We got word from New York that the commission is trying to cook up an elimination contest. Steve Hamas has beaten the pair of them. Why they want to match a couple of beaten fighters to get an opponent for Baer is too much for me."

Nor does he think much of Hamas.

"Two seen Hamas and Lasky fight out here and the champ could take the pair of them in the same ring," he boasted. "But with no one else on the horizon, it looks like Hamas might have to be the best bet."

Before starting his new picture, Baer is spending a few days at Palm Springs. The picture, which goes into production Thursday, will keep him in Hollywood six weeks or two months.

Levinsky Plays Joke—But It 'Backfires'

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Kingfish Levinsky, heavyweight fighter, must have his practical joke now and then. He went out the other day and let all the air out of the tire of a friend's car.

Shortly after, the Kingfish was tooling his own pretentious gas buggy "through Chicago streets when an overpowering stench nearly floored him. He got out, lifted the hood of his car, and there, smeared all over the motor, was some nice, hot limburger cheese!

The team expects a hard struggle for the game against Utah at Salt Lake City Saturday. Michak, Bishop and Parke, backs, and Coddling, a guard, also were injured.

PULLMAN, Wash.—Babe Hollingbery's Washington State outfit went to work with new vigor today after spending the past week more or less loafing.

Coach Bill Ingram hopes to use him to help Calkins and Stone, the regulars since "Red" Christie was injured. The Bears leave here Thursday for Seattle, stopping at Portland Friday for a workout and reaching their destination the morning of their game with University of Washington.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY—Stanford expects to have its full varsity strength in shape for the U. S. C. game here Saturday. Woody Adams, guard, and Keith Topping, end, are ready to play. Injuries kept them out of the U. S. F. contest.

LOS ANGELES—Coach Howard Jones of U. S. C. emphasized defense today as the important trump to play against Stanford in their annual battle Saturday. Jones, scarcely hopeful of bagging a victory, is aiming to strengthen his defenses as much as possible in order to retard Stanford's scoring machine. He indicated he might start "Cotton" Warburton, whose blocking has been his only strong point this season, at quarter the first time the cottontop ever has been in the opening lineup.

LOS ANGELES—Confident the California Aggies will be no more than "breadth" opponents Saturday, the U. S. L. A. Bruins left their drills today, saving their strength as much as possible for the Stanford contest a week from next Saturday.

RIVERSIDE TIE PUTS PRESSURE ON DON SQUAD

That 14-14 deadlock at Riverside has worked a hardship on Santa Ana Jaysee's potent football squad. From all appearances Coach Bill Cook's Dons must win all of their four remaining games to become champions of the Eastern division for the second straight time.

It is highly possible that Citrus or Chaffey, other title contenders, will receive but one defeat this season, which means Santa Ana would finish a half-game behind if the Dons should lose to Citrus, Chaffey, San Bernardino or Fullerton.

Undeclared after 20-6 and 7-0 verdicts over Riverside and Pomona, Coach Al Claves and his Citrus Owls may be the first to ruin Santa Ana's titular chances. They play the Dons at Azusa Saturday afternoon.

"It isn't difficult to see how Citrus defeated Riverside 20-6," according to a Pomona newspaper. "Citrus has a well drilled, veteran team, in fine condition and heavy. The Owls haven't many substitutes, but don't seem to need them."

Jim Henderson, a 200-pound fullback, is the threat of the Citrus backfield. He is a brilliant line-plunger and an exceptional passer. Henderson earned 128 of the 173 yards Citrus made from running plays while defeating Pomona, 7-0.

"In my eight years of coaching at Santa Ana Jaysee, I never have had a team play as perfectly as the Dons did against Riverside," Bill Cook commented today. Coming from a coach who has produced two Southern California championship eleven's, this is quite a tribute to the present band of Dons.

Statistics of the 14-14 thriller show Santa Ana with 11 first downs to Riverside's 10. The Dons outgained the Bengals in total yardage 299 to 246. Santa Ana earned 181 yards from runs, 118 from passes. Riverside made 132 from runs, 114 from passes.

Quarterback Bruce Harnois, an elusive 145-pounder, was a stand-out in the Santa Ana backfield. He gained 73 yards from scrimmage, a close second to Riverside's snake-bitten Merle Harris, with 77. Harnois followed his interference brilliantly, and returned Riverside punts spectacularly. Once nearly tackled on a punt to Santa Ana's 20-yard line, he evaded two Bengal tacklers and raced clear to midfield.

Wilburn Anderson, perhaps the best fullback in the league, gained 51 yards from scrimmage. Dick Moore, a hard-driving freshman, was third with 39, and end back Bob Mitchell gained 15. Mitchell was the outstanding passer on the field. Sammy Tucker, running guard, made a bid for conference rating when he intercepted a Riverside pass and ran 42 yards, and later recovered a Bengal fumble. He played four quarters of alert football.

Major Anderson, 145-quarterback, received a severe bruise on his right foot in a drill at the Bowl yesterday, and may be lost to the Dons Saturday. His foot was badly swollen, and it was believed he had ruptured a blood vessel.

Ben Slavin, regular left end, missed practice on account of an infected leg, but probably will be ready for Citrus.

MINNESOTA ELEVEN 'TOPS' IN BIG TEN

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Football fans in the Midwest today were inclined to concede Minnesota the Big Ten title, but at the same time speculated over the Gophers meeting their Waterloo when least expected, as did St. Mary's, Texas and Washington State.

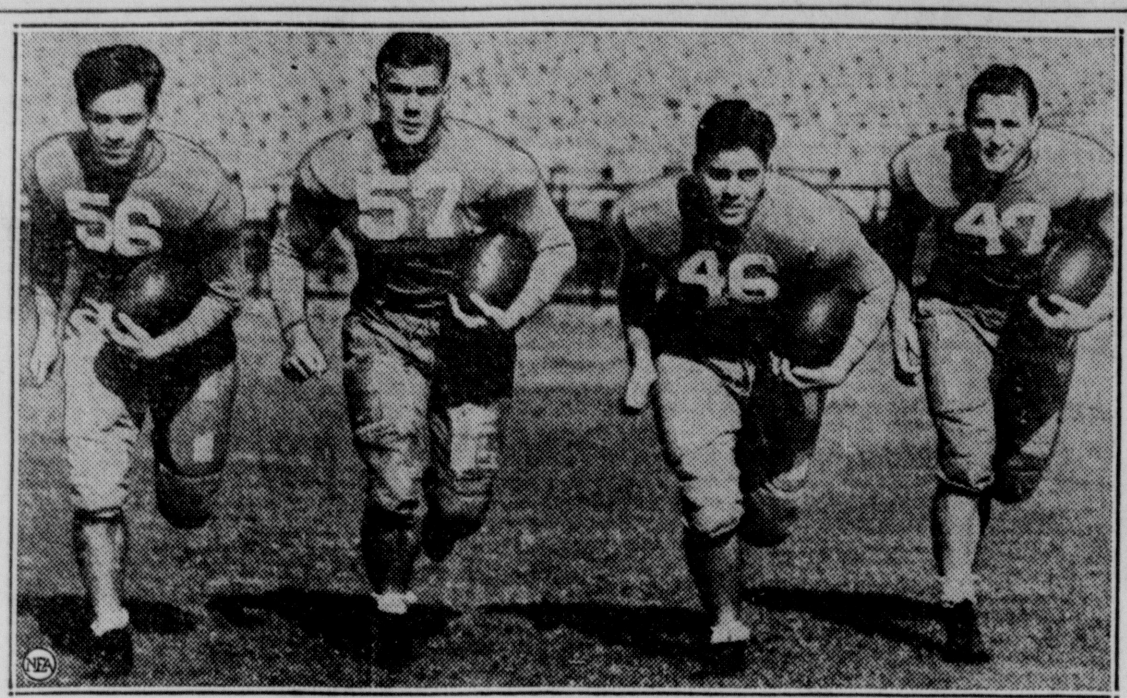

St. Mary's beat California, 7-0, and then lost to Nevada, 9-7, which previously had lost to California, 33-0. Texas, boasting victories over Notre Dame, 7-6, and Oklahoma, 19-0, bowed to Centenary, which had lost to Oklahoma, 7-0. After knocking off Southern California, 19-6, Washington State fell before little Gonzaga, 13-6.

So Minnesota had better not take anything for granted in this year of dizzy, dope-defying upsets and reverses of form, or the Gophers may find themselves in sad company.

Minnesota's conference schedule calls for games with Iowa, Washington, Indiana, Chicago and Wisconsin. Chicago is the only unbeaten team in the quietest, and the Maroons are quite likely to be knocked out of select company before they head north to meet Minnesota. The Gophers' next three opponents, Iowa, Michigan and Indiana, each have lost two games, but they can't count any of them setups. Even Wisconsin, beaten easily by Purdue, may be plenty tough by the time Minnesota meets the Badgers in the season's final.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT AT ROSE BOWL JAN. 1?

TROJAN SQUAD OFF THURSDAY FOR PALO ALTO

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23.—Still carrying the hopes of thousands of Southland fans despite their setbacks of the past three weeks, the Trojans of University of Southern California entrain Thursday night for Palo Alto where Saturday they resume their longstanding rivalry with the Stanford Indians.

Approximately 40 men are slated to make the trip. They will spend the day before the game at the secluded Castledown Country club, which is located 25 miles inland from Palo Alto, and a final light warmup on the club course Friday afternoon will complete their preparations for the battle.

Despite defeats by Washington State and Pittsburgh and the 6-6 tie with Oregon State here Saturday, neither Trojan players nor Trojan fans are down-hearted.

Advance dope has it that Saturday's game will have Stanford's strongest team in history pitted against what so far has appeared to be one of S. C.'s weakest eleven's of recent years, but in spite of the odds, Southland followers believe the Trojans can make it a battle.

Improvement in S. C. play has been noted during the past week and the weakness in the fundamentals of blocking, charging and tackling is being gradually overcome as the result of the steady drill on these phases of the game by Coach Howard Jones and his assistants. What changes, if any, are being made in the S. C. style of play for the Stanford game will not be revealed until the battle begins Saturday, as the gates of Bovard field, Troy's practice grounds, are being kept tightly locked during this week's work-

Southern California—Stanford football rivalry, which dates back to 1905, has produced some of the game's greatest thrillers. The Trojans have a decided edge in the won and lost column, although Stanford, with three victories and a tie out of nine games played during the Jones regime at Troy has the best record of any Pacific Coast conference institution against S. C.'s "Head Man." Since Trojans and Indians began their feud 29 years ago, they have played 15 games, with Southern California victorious in ten, Stanford in four and one tie.

Here are the scores in past Southern California—Stanford competition:

1905—Stanford, 17-0.
1916—S. C., 25-6.
1917—S. C., 13-0.
1920—S. C., 10-0.
1922—S. C., 6-0.
1923—S. C., 14-7.
1924—S. C., 13-9.
1925—Stanford, 13-12.
1927—Tie, 13-13.
1928—S. C., 10-0.
1929—S. C., 7-0.
1930—S. C., 41-12.
1931—S. C., 19-0.
1932—S. C., 13-0.
1933—Stanford, 13-7.

TEXAS TECH, LOYOLA MEET FRIDAY NIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23.—Traveling in their own special train and accompanied by 125 rooters, Texas Tech's Maroon Raiders invade Los Angeles this week to clash with Loyola University's football squad at Gilmore stadium Friday night.

Coaches Pete Cawthon and "Dutch" Smith have 33 strong, powerful athletes who will attempt to crush the Lions.

The team from Texas is regarded as one of the best in the south and the players are coming to the coast to prove to western fans that the brand of ball played in the Lone Star state is the best in the country.

The school band of 50 pieces is being brought to Los Angeles to inspire the athletes for the game. Texas Tech plays the Notre Dame system of football and Coach Cawthon has added a few innovations of his own. J. Nell, who plays either fullback or left halfback, is a powerful runner and so is "Mule" Dowell.

Bill Hawkins Shifted Into Saint Backfield

Reverberations from Santa Ana's 21-7 waxing by San Diego were still felt on the Saint football field today.

Still exploring for a smoother offense, Coach Bill Foote made half-dozen drastic changes in his lineup and cracked the whip harder than ever in a desperate effort to assemble a winning combination in time for Glendale Saturday afternoon.

The Saints play at Glendale. The most important switch in what could be called a major shakeup removed Bill Hawkins from right end to left halfback, perhaps the most important offensive position in the Notre Dame system which Foote employs here.

This change will enable the Saints to utilize to their fullest extent Hawkins' triple-threat abilities. Hawkins has been doing the kicking all year, coming back from his end post, but little of the passing and none of the running although he is one of the biggest and probably the fastest man on the squad. Hawkins' 40-yard forward pass in the San Diego game, paving the way for the Santa Ana touchdown, was a tipoff on Bill's possibilities as a back. The big boy played left half for a while last season but was converted into an end after the first few games.

Another noteworthy shift sent lanky Carl Schultz, first string left tackle, along the line to left end where he played part of the time in '33. In the Saint attack, the left end is expected to do considerable blocking, particularly on reverse plays.

Foote did not stop by switching Hawkins and Schultz. He sent husky Dick DeSmet back to left guard from fullback, satisfied that Dick White, who made the touchdown at San Diego, will do at full. Alfred Oliphant, erstwhile end, became first string center over Ernie Saunders and Bob Buckles whose passing from the pivot job was unsatisfactory last week. Jim Crowther, a standout against the Hillers, was established as No. 1 right tackle. Jack Robinson, Hitherto better known as a star golfer, was installed at right end. He was a pleasant surprise to Foote at San Diego where he played as a substitute for Erwin Youel at left end.

The first string lined up as follows: Schultz, left end; Bob Reid, left tackle; DeSmet, left guard; Oliphant, center; Don Evans, right guard; Crowther, right tackle; Robinson, right end; Ray Hamilton, quarter; Hawkins, left half; Ray Clark, Warren Mann and Carroll Joy, right half; White and Len Stafford, full.

Alvin Lamb, who started at quarter, is the only Santa Ana casualty. A torn ligament inside his knee will keep him out of action indefinitely, perhaps for the rest of the season.

Commercial League Cagemen Begin Race

Studded with the names of the district's outstanding floormen, six Santa Ana Commercial league basketball teams "line off" this week for their annual championship race at the Y.M.C.A.

Two games—Goodyear Tires vs. Cook's Service Station, and Garlock's Service vs. Irvine—are scheduled tonight, the first at 7:30, the latter an hour later.

Harold Ely is league president, Ralph Smedley, secretary.

The powerful Woolen Mills quintet, champion of last year's season, is expected to have a terrific time defending its title. Cook's Service team is regarded as a prime contender, and all the rest are conceded a chance to finish out in front when the first-half is completed November 22.

The Woolen Mills squad numbers such basket-shooters as Fred Wiemer, M. White, Clinton Maxson, Robert Fixel, Almond Edge, Ed Stevens, Frank Clift, Joe McChesney, Vincent McDonald and Clarence Heox.

Led by Ted Cook, the Cook quintet includes Howard and Harold Spangler, Ed Bragg, "Chub" Sears, Blanchard Beatty and Earl Homan.

Kozeluh Urges Open Tennis To Help Amateurs

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A National tennis open, in which the outstanding pros and amateurs of the country would play, would do more toward fitting U. S. amateurs for Davis Cup play than any other form of training, according to Karel Kozeluh, former world pro champion.

"There are about 12 topflight pros today," Kozeluh states. "It would be of inestimable value for American amateurs to meet them in an open tournament. It would harden them and prepare them for Davis Cup play."

"With that training, I think, the leading U. S. amateurs, Sidney Wood, Frankie Parker and Wilmer Allison, ought to be able to win the Davis Cup."

"Trouble with the amateurs today is lack of consistency. Playing the professionals would give them that," he declared.

NEVADA REINSTATES OUSTED GRID STARS

RENO, Nev., Oct. 23.—(UP)—George Tharp, fullback, and Vic Carroll, quarterback, both star athletes on the University of Nevada football team, were reinstated today by Coach "Brick" Mitchell after the interfraternity council pledged to see that training rules were observed by students participating in athletics. Both players had been dismissed shortly after they added the Wolf Pack to defeat St. Mary's college, 9 to 7, for alleged violation of training rules. J. D. Stevens, student football manager, also was reinstated.

Stevedores, Spartans To Collide Wed.

Rained out last week, the San Pedro Longshoremen and the Santa Ana Spartans will try to play their "club" football game in the Santa Ana Municipal Bowl tomorrow night.

The Spartans play three times within the next week—and-a-half. After the skirmish with the stevedores, they take on the San Diego Submarine Base eleven in San Diego Sunday and then come home to tackle La Verne college Thursday night, Nov. 1.

'THEY WANT TO TALK, NOT BOX' SAYS JOHNSTON

BY HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—James Joy Johnston, derby cocked on head, elgar jammed in mouth, feet on desk and thumbs in vest, sat in his new office at Madison Square Garden.

His new place on the fourth floor is not nearly so pretentious as the old hangout on the third, but he likes it better.

"Takes the guys looking for a touch longer to reach me," he explained. "Besides, the acoustics, or whatever you can those things, are better. Now I can hear everything I say, and that keeps me from out-smarting myself."

I was in to see him about the heavyweight situation, if any, but he was in more serious mood.

Walker in "Hall of Honor" "My boy," he said, "if you want a story, a real story, just take a look at the pictures on my wall. Keep looking at 'em and they'll tell you a story better than anything I could give you about Baer or Hamas or the German or Primo."

I gave the picture the once over. Right over Johnston's head, occupying the place of honor and wrapped in a gold frame thick as your wrist, was Jimmy Walker, the famous Walker grin turned on. There was bald, owy-eyed Jim Farley and pugnaconic, wild-eyed LaGuardia, looking like something right off a soap box. Gambler-faced John Curry looked down from those cold eyes of his. There was Grover Whalen, moustache waxed like a dance floor, and beaming with that welcome-to-our-city smile.

The Jack Dempsey of Toledo was glorious in black tights. The Gene Tunney of pre-championship days gazed awkwardly down from beneath a barber college haircut.

And a hundred others. "They Talk, Dodge Bouts" I said I'd like to know what was the matter with the heavens—why they couldn't get together for a fight or two.

"They ain't nothing wrong with the heavyweight business but one thing," Johnston said. "The mugs want to do everything but fight. They like to talk, but they don't like to sign."

"Take Charley Harvey, Hamas' manager. If I walked up to him right now and offered him $25,000 to meet Lasky, his handiebar moustache would whirl like an electric fan, he'd beat that hickory cane of his on the sidewalk, and stamp off like you'd insulted him."

"Lasky has turned his talking over to 'Gig' Rooney, and what happened? 'Gig' talked so much and so fast he ran out of words in three days, and now is helpless."

"Carnera wants to fight, but isn't sure who it must be. Schmeling is the same way. Out in California, Baer is shooting off his mouth like one of those volcano things, and saying exactly nothing flat."

"And to think I gave up the fish business to get to this."

is just as attractive as last season when both teams were unbeaten and Army scored its fifth straight victory, 21-0.

If Yale can down the soldiers Saturday, it will be one of the greatest triumphs in Eli history because the bulldog is being put through a new set of jumps by a new coaching staff which scrapped the Notre Dame system and went back to the single wing-back formation, reminiscent of the Tad Jones offensive. Youthful "Ducky" Pond is head coach, and his chief assistant is "Greasey" Neale, a master strategist.

Under Coach Pond, Yale has done a drastic about-face. No longer do the Yales smile when they play football. They are out to win. The "smiler" has given way to the unshaven caveman, roughened and toughened by stiff training. If Yale can beat Army Saturday, Pond will be hailed as a "miracle man" because he took over a team that appeared physically inadequate to face its tough schedule, and a squad that seemed entirely too small.

Bulkhead Work Authorized By Newport Beach Council

CITY LICENSE LAWS ON DOGS, CATS DROPPED

NEWPORT BEACH, Oct. 23.—Work will start immediately on the new $18,000 bulkhead to be built along the west side of the channel entrance on the Balboa peninsula, the Newport Beach city council meeting last night to hear final protests against the work. Bonds will be issued at 7 per cent with a nine year maturity date, it was decided, under terms of the improvement act of 1911.

The work, which was first proposed on September 24, will consist of 323.17 lineal feet of wooden bulkhead, to be built along the easterly side of block P, tract 518, on the peninsula, along with 252 lineal feet of revetments and abutments. The total cost of the work will be $18,018.04, according to estimates of City Engineer R. L. Patterson. Bids will be sought at once.

The council also determined a minimum wage scale to be allowed on the work, in accordance with state regulations on the matter, as follows: foreman, $1 per hour; pile driver operators, $1 per hour; carpenters, $1 per hour; skilled labor, 65c per hour; labor, 50c per hour; and watchmen, 50c per hour. Time and a half will be paid for all overtime work.

Word was received of the apportionment of SERRA funds for the work of opening Bay avenue between Ninth and Tenth streets, in Newport Beach, which will be commenced immediately. Local labor or relief rolls being used. The city owns all title to property along that street, it was revealed, and the only preliminary work that will have to be done is the moving of the Boy Scout hall, located across the projected line of the street.

The new dog and cat licensing ordinance, scheduled to come up for its first reading last night, struck a snag when several letters from cat lovers were read, requesting that no license be levied on the feline pets. Councilman Paul Ellsworth, voicing the thought that no one was going to bell the cat, moved that all pet licenses be removed, and the new ordinance was scrapped before it was given its first reading.

The council voted to repeal existing license laws on cats, and City Attorney Roland Thompson was instructed to draw up a new ordinance by which the city will register all pets free of charge, issuing tags for dogs. The work of the poundmaster and dog catcher will continue as before, despite the loss of license revenue.

Mrs. Ida Burlingame was reappointed as chairman of the library board, when it was revealed that her tenure of office had expired last July. A communication from the Huntington Beach Armistice day parade committee, requesting a municipal entry in the parade to represent Newport Beach, was read and referred to the chamber of commerce for action.

The new gambling ordinance for the city, which was expected to come up for its first reading last night, was not brought up, owing to a delay in making the final draft. It was learned the matter would be referred to the council either at its next meeting October 29, or on November 5.

HOME WELL ON EAST SIDE TO GET TEST SOON

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Oct. 23.—The Dome oil well on the Newland-Borchard tract on the east side is standing cemented, with a string of blank pipe in the hole. When the cement is set, or within three to five days, the casing will be perforated and an effort made to open the various oil strata penetrated by the drill. This is the latest method of bringing in wells where the oil sand and water sand are close together in the formation.

The D. D. Dunlap Oil company is exploring the hole of the old Standard-Mills No. 1 well on the Mills Land and Water company 57-acre lease on the east side. The hole is cleaned out to 4000 feet and will shortly be surveyed. Later the operators may side track at some point to get a new hole in the sand. This well was originally a 700-barrel a day producer until water broke in, when it was abandoned. The Dunlap company hopes by modern methods of oil drilling to open the sand and also effect a better water shut-off.

DISCUSSED BY REV. RALSTON

GARDEN GROVE, Oct. 23.—The Rev. Grover Ralston, pastor of the First Methodist church, spoke Sunday morning on the subject "The Social Gospel and the Personal Religion," declaring that it was impossible to separate the spiritual interests of individual souls from the social situation. He said, in part:

"If we start out in caring about people's faith in God, we commonly discover that there is some social condition that crushes faith in God. First, much that we care for most, whether as persons or as families, depends upon what happens to two social problems, the organization of our economic life and that of our international relations. Second, there is no real relief from the evils of the world in those two fields without changing the world.

"Just as our father had to change their world from feudalism to monarchy and from monarchy to democracy, so deep-seated and far-reaching social changes will be required of us and of our children. And third, so far as the method is concerned, we have a choice between reform and revolution, that I should suppose, that any man in his senses would work sacrificially or reform if only to avoid the tragedy of revolution.

"So far as history is concerned, that path is plain and has been often traveled. We have just sung Whittier's hymn, 'Dear Lord and Father of mankind, forgive our feverish ways.' To be sure some one will say, he was a Quaker and a mystic and, of course, he believed in personal religion. But that is not the whole story. Whittier was a social reformer and never ceased being so.

The conflict with slavery aroused Whittier. 'In his young manhood the abolition headquarters in Philadelphia were raided by a mob and only by disguising himself did he escape. In his old age he once said to a youth, 'My lad, if thou wouldst win success, join thyself to some unpopular cause.' Nobody understood Whittier unless he sees him traveling that path from personal religion to social reform and from social reform to personal religion.

"If you wish an example from the Bible, turn to Jeremiah. Jeremiah was a social prophet concerned with statesmanship, economics and international relationships. He was the wisest seer in public affairs among his people, but he sure he never would have stood his ground, as he did, for 40 years through national and international catastrophe a very tower of public strength a fearless and indomitable conscience to his people, if he had not deepened his experience through social reform into personal religion. There is no doubt that society depends now as then, on things that only a vital, intelligent, effective, personal religion can supply.

"Social conditions are much better in Labrador because Sir Wilfred Grenfell has been there. And South Africa is better because Robert Moffat has been there. And we cannot think about the slums without thinking about General William Booth. Some one has said, that if religion ends with the individual, it ends. But so long as Jesus has influence in his church there only one place where the gospel can end and that is with the kingdom of God on earth, which is a better social order. But that will cost us transformed lives. The saving of society does depend on things which only high personal religion can supply."

CHAPTER XXIII

David Bannister was late coming to breakfast next morning and when he did, he dived over his food. He turned on the radio in the living room. He listened for five minutes and then turned it off. After a glance at the headlines he showed no interest at all in the morning newspaper.

To his aunt's questions about the King murder case he gave sketchy answers. Kate Hewlett, not to be ignored, persisted in her questioning and finally Bannister retreated upstairs to his room.

There he sat, smoking one cigarette after another. He decided to look for an old tobacco pouch he had somewhere and rummaged through his luggage. The tobacco pouch was not found. Bannister came across a photograph in the search—a photograph in a leather frame, showing a pretty girl, smiling. He placed the picture on the desk before him and leaned forward, studying it.

Adele was not beautiful. Even in the days when he had been most in love with her, Bannister had never considered her that. Hers were not the perfect classic features. Her eyes, for instance, slanted ever so slightly. Her cheek bones were too high. Nevertheless, she was an extremely attractive young woman. Devilishly attractive.

Bannister picked up the photograph. Devilishly attractive was right! And heartless and unprincipled, a slave to her own ambitions. Adele was all of those things. She took a man's heart, played with it like a toy, using it for her purposes—

Bannister sprang to his feet. He crossed the room and strode back again. Why should he condemn Adele? She was no worse than the rest of them! Women were all alike. He was the one to be condemned, because he was a fool. He had let this other girl—the one accused of Tracy King's murder—wind him around her fingers as easily as Adele had. He had listened to her story, believed it, even tried to help her. And he wasn't in love with her as he had been with Adele. Nothing of the sort. There was no excuse to be offered for the blind way in which he had fallen for her guile. From the newspaper Bannister had learned that the girl had never confessed the murder. Nevertheless, she was guilty; there was no doubt of it. It took a level head like McNeal's to deal with such a creature. She was guilty as hell. She had shot a man and now she should take her punishment.

With a quick movement Bannister snuffed out the cigarette he had been smoking and dropped it into a tray. The punishment for murder was life imprisonment at the least. Bannister knew all about state prisons. He'd been in many of them. He could see the girl, in a drab uniform, working at a monotonous prison task. He could see her bending over a sewing machine. Lifting heavy tubs in a laundry. He could see her in a small cell at night, looking out from behind the bars—

Instantly Bannister flung himself into a chair. There he was, going soft again! He wouldn't do it. He'd go down to see McNeal and tell him what he knew about the girl. He'd tell him about meeting her and seeing the gun in her handbag.

That thought died instantly. No, he couldn't do that. It was the one thing he couldn't do. He remembered the promise he had given. "I'll never hear about it from me." He had been a fool to make such a promise but, having made it, he would keep it. He couldn't tell McNeal about the gun.

Bannister stared at the picture on the desk before him and his eyes hardened. He'd been a fool, but that was ended. Adele had deceived him. So had the girl who called herself Juliet France. Well, from now on it would be a different story.

Bannister ate lunch and rode down town on a street car. He did not go to the Evening Post office because he didn't want to risk meeting Jim Paxton. Bannister was not in a mood for conversation, even with an old friend like Paxton. At police headquarters he'd learn what was going on without wasting any time.

He strode up the steps and made his way to the detective bureau. McNeal was not in his office. A detective whose name Bannister did not know informed him that the captain was out of the building.

"Know when he'll be back?" Bannister asked.

The detective did not.

Bannister lingered, sitting on a corner of a desk. "Understand the girl hasn't confessed yet?"

It was a question, though no phrased as one. The other man shook his head. "She hasn't" he

HOUSING PLAN DISCUSSED BY BEACH GROUP

NEWPORT BEACH, Oct. 23.—Plans to cooperate with the SERRA housing survey, being conducted under terms of the National Housing act, were discussed at Monday's meeting of the local housing committee. Seven new members were added to the group, in order to cover the beach locality completely as the county survey gets under way.

Consideration of plans for the survey resulted in a decision to distribute necessary booklets in Newport Beach and vicinity, and to present the plan to Newport Harbor High school students. Walter Spicer was appointed to represent the harbor committee at the industrial conference to be held under the auspices of the Los Angeles housing committee Friday.

Chairman L. W. Briggs told of the meeting held at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce offices, last week when delegates from almost every community in Southern California were present and reported progress in their several cities. The housing program is gaining momentum all over the country, according to these speakers, and it is believed the program will not only be general throughout the country, but that every section of California will benefit by its provisions.

New members of the local committee include Costa Mesa, Sidney Davidson, principal of the high school; LeRoy Anderson, president of the Costa Mesa Chamber of Commerce; and C. W. To-Winkle, Newport Beach, Hall Will Smith and H. M. Lane. Claude A. Pullen, Corona Del Mar, and Harry Estus, Newport.

ANNUAL SUNSET PARTY HELD BY CHURCH GROUP

GARDEN GROVE, Oct. 23.—The annual Sunset social sponsored by the Woman's Aid of the Methodist Episcopal church was held in the church parlors recently with over 60 elderly people of the community in attendance. A chicken dinner was served at noon at tables decorated with button chrysanthemums, while baskets of dahlias and Mexican sunflowers decorated the rooms.

Mrs. J. M. Chilson, president of the Aid society, gave the address of welcome and introduced the Rev. William Harkness, who originated the sunset socials when he was pastor here 12 years ago. As the occasion marked the 25th wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Harkness they were presented with a basket of lovely flowers by Mrs. Chilson on behalf of the society. Flowers were also presented to Miss Mary Miller and H. A. Young, who were the oldest members present.

The program was then turned over to the guests. A poem "The Charm of the Sea," which had been written by Mrs. Flora Geren, was read by Mrs. Albert Schneider. Mrs. Louise Schauer read a poem, "God's Key," after which Mrs. M. Tarkin gave two poems by "Van Dyke," and the Rev. F. A. Ames an original poem.

By request Mrs. Albert Schneider sang, "Give of Your Best to the Master" and "The Old Rugged Cross," with Mrs. Ralph Chaffee playing her piano accompaniment. Mrs. Grover Ralston gave a reading, "Just Friends," and upon the request of H. A. Bean, Mrs. E. M. Dozier recited an appropriate poem for the occasion and Mrs. A. Schnitzer read, "I'm Not Growing Old." Mr. and Mrs. White, who are visiting here from the east, sang a humorous duet.

Miss Mary Miller recited a poem which she had given 35 years ago in a country school. If A. Young, of Long Beach, one of the early settlers of Garden Grove, spoke briefly. The Rev. Grover Ralston gave the closing talk.

The UNKNOWN BLOND

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Who killed Tracy King, orchestra leader found dead in his hotel apartment?

David Bannister, author, former newspaper reporter, undertakes to find out.

Among the suspects are an "unknown blond" who visited King shortly before his death; a girl named Scurlach in jail and declaring her innocence, who wrote King a threatening letter; Joe Parrott, King's former vaudeville partner, with whom he had had trouble; Melvina Holister, middle-aged spinster, who had quarreled with King after his cat killed her canary.

The blond suspect is arrested. Bannister talks to her, but she refuses to tell where she came from or say anything about herself. "Denise Lang, King's fiancée, didn't know the prisoner as the girl she saw talking to King the day before his death. The girl admits going to King's apartment to get some letters, but denies any knowledge of the murder."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

David Bannister was late coming to breakfast next morning and when he did, he dived over his food. He turned on the radio in the living room. He listened for five minutes and then turned it off. After a glance at the headlines he showed no interest at all in the morning newspaper.

DELAYED FURY

State Secretary Hull did not explain what he meant recently by those strangely harsh and un-diplomatic words against certain chiseling nations. He did not have to. Every diplomatic insider here knew what he was talking about.

There is one small nation in Central Europe which increased its tariff duties in preparation for tariff bargaining with us. Two South American republics made similar moves in the same direction.

Mr. Hull found out about these tricks, and, before issuing his explosion against the "indefensible practice of padding the price," he took the matter up with these three nations in private. They agreed to stop such tactics, and nothing got out about it.

Therefore, when Mr. Hull issued his blast against the chiselers, there actually was no chiseling then in the wind. If there had been, he could not have used such strong language without causing offense.

However, he thought this was a very good time to speak his mind for the effect it would have on some of the larger nations, two of them in particular.

UNCERTAINTY

Two brothers, who are foremost among American brewers, strolled into Treasury Secretary Morgenthau's office the other day with troubled looks on their faces. They were worried about monetary uncertainty and wondered what Mr. Morgenthau was going to do about the dollar.

Of course, Mr. Morgenthau never tells anyone what he is going to do about the dollar, even when he knows. Warily he replied by asking the brewing brothers about their business. They agreed it never had a higher collar on it, even in pre-prohibition days.

"Well," said Mr. Morgenthau, "what do you care what I do about the dollar as long as you are making more of them now?" They agreed that, perhaps, there was something in that view, explaining they would never have asked about the matter except that they had been told by some business associates that Mr. Morgenthau might do something about the dollar which would make people stop drinking beer.

They went home with their uncertainty allayed.

NRA MUSCLE

There is a general public impression that Donald Richberg has succeeded General Johnson as the strong man of the NRA. That is not the situation.

If you could look in on the oval room at the White House these days, you would see in a minute that Mr. Roosevelt alone has become the new muscle man of the Blue Eagle. He is handling everything down to utmost detail.

As an example, the other day the NRA board called on him. Afterward, it was announced they were just going over the reorganization plans. What actually happened was that the board could not agree on the phraseology of an executive order which will be issued shortly. The President arbitrated the dispute and wrote the language to be used in the order.

That will be the way on every point in development of new NRA policy. The board has orders that, if they are unable to agree unanimously, the issue should be taken to the President, and everyone knows the board rarely will be able to agree on anything important.

PATIENCE

The Nazis are developing a sense of humor. Apparently they have decided to laugh off that public demand made by Congressman MacCormack for the recall of the German ambassador, Hans Luther, because of Luther's pro-Nazi activities.

The charge is not taken very seriously by our state department people. They know Luther is not much of a Nazi enthusiast, recalling that the Nazis forced him out of the presidency of the Reichsbank and sent him over here because he was not exactly of their ilk.

Ordinarily, Luther would have come running down to the state department as soon as he heard the MacCormack charge, but everyone was glad he paid no attention to it.

NOTES

The treasury is watching very closely the results of the house-to-house salesmanship campaign in behalf of the 3 per cent home mortgage bonds. It really is a test of the plan to sell government recovery bonds that way and the experience gained from it may largely determine whether a treasury bond sale will be attempted.

No tears would be shed around the state department if the American munitions salesmen should get into trouble in South America or elsewhere. One official was asked recently about reports reaching the senate munitions committee that the lives of salesmen in South America are in danger. He replied: "I am sorry to say the report has not been confirmed."

Concerning Mr. Gaffey's prospects in the Pennsylvania senatorial contest, one of the main New Dealers here say: "Well, if he does win, it will NOT mean a new flood of patronage, because he already has got the patronage." (Copyright, 1934, by Paul Mallon)

NEW YORK

By James McMullin

ARCHITECTS

Federal Reserve officials have begun to play a very active part behind the scenes in shaping the future of the banking structure.

They've been singularly on the sidelines until recently. It is noteworthy that when the Senate Committee was probing banking abuses nobody thought it worth while to call as witnesses the men who were supposedly in charge of the banking system. Up to March, 1933, the New York Federal Reserve Bank—by all odds the most influential—followed policies which reflected fairly closely the views of the big member banks in its district. Since FDR took office all Federal Reserve banks have headed Washington's wishes without argument. In both situations the Federal Reserve was more servant than master.

As the central bank battle has developed it has appeared to be a clash between advocates of full government control on one side and privately owned commercial banks on the other—with the Federal Reserve banks themselves simply inactive pawns on the chessboard.

This concept is no longer accurate. Federal Reserve leaders are busy concocting a bank reform program of their own which by no means coincides with the ideas of member banks. Their plan involves utilizing the present banking machinery with the government having a much larger voice in its management than at present—although it does not go as far as the central bank project in handing complete authority to the government. Insiders understand that the Federal Reserve's recommendations will carry weight where it counts in administration circles.

Governor George Harrison of the New York Reserve Bank is an important factor in current deliberations. Harrison has several times been reported on his way to the nearest exit but has staged a strong comeback. The informed predict he will be a headliner in whatever revised set-up is adopted.

ed. Ex-Chairman Eugene Black of the Federal Reserve Board is also a key man among the alteration architects. He is thoroughly familiar with the views of both government and bankers and has done some skilful reconciling in his time.

SILVER

Authorities say that the Chinese tax on silver exports is tantamount to a complete embargo and must inevitably result in enormous price disparities between Shanghai on the one hand and Hong-Kong, Bombay and London—the three greatest silver markets in the world—on the other. They predict further that this condition is sure to breed wholesale bootlegging of the metal which will eventually drain Shanghai of its silver as surely as if no duty had been imposed.

Some of the lustiest protests against our silver policy come from industries established in China with British and Japanese capital at a time when low silver assured them low competitive costs. The informed remark that we have no special reason to lose sleep over their woes because their prosperity was gained almost entirely at the expense of the products of Western labor. "We're feeding them a dose of their own medicine and it doesn't taste so good—but that's no reason we should change the prescription."

You may soon see the old spectacle of the U. S. government helping China carry out her threat to adopt the gold standard by swapping some of our gold for her silver—despite Secretary Hull's opposition.

We may have to do this as a measure of self-defense. Otherwise it's quite possible that China will be forced into England's arms and become a member of the sterling bloc. The British would be only too delighted to foreclose on our Oriental trade prospects if they get the chance.

ELECTION

New York Republicans are elated by evidence of widening rifts in the Democratic lute.

The Tammany Old Guard—who still carry a tidy collection of votes in their pockets—have never become reconciled to taking orders from J. M. Farley. The city is their meat and a number of them would shed no tears over a defeat for the State ticket if it gave them a chance to climb back on the local throne. They figure it might do so because it would discredit Farley leadership.

A veteran political observer predicts that the Old Guard will knife Lehman to the bone and that a surprisingly large number of Democrats will either vote for Hyman or go to the movie on election day. Tammany Leader Dooling—Farley's choice—is trying to quell the silent insurrection but isn't having much luck.

The fact that Governor Lehman is making his opening campaign speech under Tammany auspices is significant. No other Democratic candidate for governor ever did that. Even Al Smith used to steer clear of the Wigwag during campaigns. This conciliatory gesture is a desperate remedy—admittedly it will hurt Lehman with independent Democrats and outside the city—but even such an obvious tribute to the Tiger will not assure that animals' enthusiastic support. Lehman is still favored in the betting but it's possible that Moses may pull an astonishing upset with Tammany's help.

FIRST

After all the talk about trans-Atlantic airmail you may have been surprised at that story of a line across the Pacific. Why the sudden interest in the bigger and tougher pond when the rich Atlantic plum is ready to hand? Observers here point for answer to persistent reports of the ambitious plans of Great Britain's Imperial Airways. The story is that a trans-Canadian line will be linked at each end to services across the oceans and thus complete Imperial's span of the globe.

"Those British mean business. Maybe it wouldn't be so dumb to get there first in case. And don't forget the sobering influence on the Japanese of seeing American planes dropping into their backyards once a week on schedule." (Copyright, 1934 McClure News'r Syn.)

Club Formed By Japanese Girls

TALBERT, Oct. 23.—Representative young Japanese women of Orange county met recently at the Talbert Japanese school to organize a Japanese girls' club.

Toshiko Yamaguchi and Hot-suko Matsumiya represented Garden Grove; Lily Yamai and Shunze Fushiro, Santa Ana; Yoshiko Da-bashi, Yorba Linda; Kinuo Shiz-tani, Anaheim, and Mae Asari and Mitsuyo Sugita, Westminster. Mrs. Jessie Hayden, of Huntington Beach, and Mrs. K. Kikuchi, of Wintersburg, chaperoned the group. All Japanese girls of other communities will be invited to the next meeting of the group.

HOLD SURPRISE SHOWER

LA HABRA, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Norton R. Skinner and Mrs. Phyllis West were co-hostesses at a recent surprise shower given for Mrs. Orville Proud, at the Skinner home on West Erna avenue.

Guests were the honoree, Mrs. Douglas McGill, Mrs. P. B. Clark, Mrs. Steve Smith, Mrs. Juanita Hawkins, of Fullerton; Mrs. Robert Williams, of Long Beach; Mrs. Melvin Morris, Mrs. Helen Cook, Mrs. C. B. Smallwood, Mrs. Delbert Haines and Mrs. Wilbur Proud.

Prizes in bridge were won by Mrs. Robert Williams and Mrs. C. B. Smallwood.

nobody hurt—
—but the patient!

Some say that Amendments 9 and 17, the Chiropractic and Naturopath initiatives, would "hurt nobody."

They forget the patient. The patient, of course, would be the only one hurt (if you don't count his grieving relatives), by legally permitting just any healer who has $25 for a license, to practice medicine and surgery.

But the patient might be you! Or your child! What then? Do you want your child's life in the hands of an untrained person, who bears the legal label of "doctor" only because he paid $25 for a license, and maybe $25 more for a diploma from some so-called college or "diploma mill," which these same amendments would legally create.

He will call himself a "doctor" and you will have no way to distinguish him from a genuine physician and surgeon—until it is too late; after his damage is done.

But you could do nothing about it then. For the "doctors" created under Amendments 9 and 17 would be under no authority or restraint except their own. They need not answer to governor or state legislature—because you voted them in by initiative.

Real physicians and surgeons are under control and regulation of boards responsible to governor or legislature. Chiropractors and Naturopaths too, now are under such control.

These chiropractors and naturopaths, by the way, would not lose any rights or privileges, nor would the public be in any way prevented from choosing them, by the defeat of 9 and 17. So it is no wonder that even the chiropractors are opposing these amendments. Officers of the California Chiropractic Association have declared against both 9 and 17.

Vote "NO" on No. 9 and No. 17

It is the duty of every citizen to vote against these two vicious measures, in the interest of public safety.

You cannot vote skill into a surgeon.
You cannot instill knowledge of drugs into a drugless healer, by vote.
Vote an emphatic "NO" on Amendments 9 and 17.

HON. S. C. HARTRANFT WILL DISCUSS 9 AND 17 OVER KREG TONIGHT AT 7:00

ANAHEIM PREPARING UNUSUAL PROGRAM OF ENTERTAINMENT FOR ANNUAL HALLOWE'EN AFFAIR

Anaheim's annual Harvest Festival, to be staged Hallowe'en afternoon and evening, is expected to be outstanding this year in entertainment offered during the celebration, according to plans announced today by members of the committee in charge of the event.

The colorful parade scheduled to start at 7 p. m. will climax the Hallowe'en celebration. Attractive floats, grotesque costumes and musical organizations and marching units will lend color and beauty to this feature of the celebration.

According to Roy Mendoza, seven outstanding musical organizations in the county already have accepted invitations to take part in the parade, including the SERRA band, Anaheim Union High school band, Anaheim Legion drum and bugle corps, Santa Ana Legion drum and bugle corps, Whittier State School band, Veterans of Foreign Wars drum corps and the Orange County band, under the leadership of D. C. Clanton.

Governor Frank Merriam has been extended an invitation to ride in the parade and, according to members of his official family, probably will accept the invitation. Other state, county and city officials also will ride in places of honor in the parade.

Following the parade, a vaudeville program, featuring some of the greatest stars of the theater and cinema world, will be presented in the Greek theater in the Anaheim Municipal park. A portion of Center street will be blocked off for a street dance; music for the dance will be provided by the best dance orchestra obtainable, according to the announcement.

This year's festival will present one of the greatest gatherings of horses and horsemen that has ever participated in the annual event. R. F. MacBeth, in charge of the mounted section of the parade, already has reported that the mounted section of the parade will include more than 200 horses this year. These entries will include best stock in Orange county as well as entries from some of the prominent stables in Los Angeles and Southern California.

Several horses that have won ribbons in horse shows of the Southland within the past few months will be seen in the parade and in the horse show that is being planned for the afternoon preceding the parade. Under present plans a horse show will be staged during the afternoon. It is planned to hold the show in the city park on the ball grounds.

Among famous riders who will participate in the show are Monte Montana, famous rodeo and circus rider, his wife and their trained mounts. Both Montana and his wife toured the United States this year with Al G. Barnes circus, rode in the World Congress of Rough Riders last year in Los Angeles Coliseum. In the Fiesta del Oro here last year and in other outstanding rodeos and shows.

SERA LEADERS SEEKING MORE CITY PROJECTS

Stressing the need for more SERA projects and expressing a desire for enough work to provide a planned program of from six to 12 months in Orange county, state and county SERA officials met last night in James cafe with 30 city and county engineers, municipal officers and school district officials.

Jacob Porter, district field engineer for Southern California, and Terence Halloran, county head of the emergency relief organization, were the principal speakers. They declared that worthwhile projects of a permanent nature were more desired than maintenance or temporary projects, so that when the SERA program is completed, there will be something tangible to show for results.

"The case load of the SERA is increasing as winter approaches and more projects are needed," Halloran said. "Cities should be eager to provide further projects, and prevent a staggering increase in the direct relief rolls. It is far better to expend money on the SERA projects and receive direct benefits than delay now and be forced to turn over money for county relief to the unemployed."

Dan Mulholland and William J. Tway, officials in the county administration, spoke briefly on other phases of the SERA problem. Mayor E. G. Warner and City Engineer J. L. McBride of Santa Ana were especially interested in Porter's list of preferred types of work, which included the repair of sidewalks. When this work was included in one of Santa Ana's projects, the San Francisco office of the SERA refused to approve it.

McBride and Porter drove over the city this morning to see the need for sidewalk repairs and it is expected that a new project will be formulated and resubmitted to state heads.

Porter was in Fullerton this afternoon with Mayor William Hale and was to pay special attention to an airport project.

YOUR GROCER WILL HELP YOU KEEP HEALTHY AND HAPPY

Delicious Cereal Promotes Regular Habits

The right kinds of foods form the very basis of health. You need nourishment for strength and energy. And you need "bulk" to prevent common constipation.

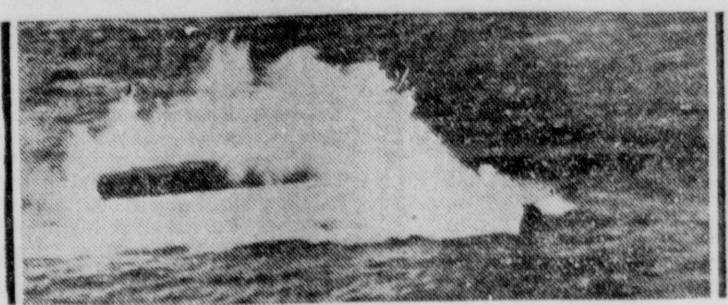

Otherwise, this ailment may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy. You can correct it, usually, by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN adds generous "bulk" to your daily menu. Tests show this "bulk" is similar to that found in leafy vegetables. Inside the body, the fiber of ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently, this clears out the intestinal wastes.

Picturing Plane Crash at Sea!

Here comes a news reel plane toward the U. S. Lines' S. S. Washington 650 miles at sea, to pick up films of King Alexander's assassination.

The plane is forced to risk a landing on the choppy sea. It throws a plume of spray the moment it touches the water.

Then disaster. The plane turns turtle. Henry Johnson, a mechanic, is killed. Four survivors cling to the fuselage, to be rescued by Captain George Fried's crew, and brought back to New York, with the films.

THANKS EXPRESSED BY VET LEADER FOR SUPPORT OF TOY PLAN; MANY MORE NEEDED

Expressing appreciation for the excellent support already offered by residents of this section who are interested in aiding the Veterans of Foreign Wars in seeing that no children have their faith in Santa Claus shaken at Christmas time, Commander Charles E. Camm today thanked those who have been generous enough and interested enough to donate old toys which will be reconditioned and distributed at Christmas.

At the same time, he pointed out, notify the veterans where they that there will be hundreds of toys which will be collected.

None of the toys collected will be sold, but will be used to fill stockings of children who otherwise would be disappointed on Christmas morning. This year the fire department is not carrying on with work of a similar nature, and as far as is known, the V.F.W. is the only group which will do this kindly work.

Persons that wish to help may call Camm at 2416 or Hendrickson at 4835W.

CITY EMPLOYS ARCHITECTS ON CITY HALL JOB

Containing the terms of a verbal agreement made several months ago, a contract was signed by the city council last night with Austin and Wildman, associated architects, for the architectural supervision of the building of the new city hall at Third and Main streets.

Bids could not be called for last night because of an unforeseen technicality. Government officials require 20 copies of the specifications, each of which is more than 200 pages in length. The original copy was taken to Los Angeles Saturday and fully approved after which it was learned that each of the 20 copies must be likewise checked and approved individually. It will require at least three days to assemble and make the copies so the advertising for bids had to be delayed one week.

The new contract is divided into several parts. The architects must furnish preliminary sketches, 2 sets of working drawings, and specifications, and must supervise the actual construction. The fee for the architects will be six per cent of the entire cost of the building, 41-2 per cent of which will be paid upon the completion of the working drawing and full approval of PWA authorities. The remainder will be paid on monthly installments as the work progresses.

If the work is abandoned or delayed after starting, the architect will be paid in proportion to the work done.

The building will cost slightly in excess of $100,000, $70,000 of which is a loan from the federal government and $30,000 a grant. The request for a loan was made after voters approved a bond issue last December. It is estimated that barring un-

COUNTY NEAR HEAD OF LIST IN STATE IN LOW TAX RATE; EIGHTH IN TOTAL VALUES

Orange county again stands at the virtual head of the list of California counties with respect to low tax rates, being exceeded by only three comparatively unpopulated counties of more or less insignificant fiscal affairs.

This was disclosed today as county again ranks well up, in State Controller Ray L. Riley issued his annual statement of property valuations, public indebtedness, and tax rates for the various counties.

Orange county's tax rates of 92 cents per $100 assessed valuation inside of incorporated cities and $1.04 outside of cities is low in the state, except for Kings county, which is thirtieth in population rank, Placer thirty-first in population, and San Benito, forty-first in population. Orange county is ninth in population rank, and ranks from sixth to tenth in various items of property values. Inyo county, fifty-first in population rank, has a lower inside rate than Orange county, 85 cents; but its outside rate is $1.05.

Sixteen other counties have more acreage assessed for taxation than Orange county, but Orange ranks seventh in value of real estate, with $69,370,955. This county's $38,112,245 in value of improvements also gives it seventh rank. Los Angeles, San Francisco, Alameda, San Diego, Fresno and Kern are ahead in real estate valuations; Los Angeles, San Francisco, Alameda, San Diego, Sacramento and Santa Clara counties lead Orange in value of improvements.

This county stands sixth in value of personal property, $17,890,730, exceeded by Los Angeles, San Francisco, Alameda, Contra Costa and Kern. Assessment of money shows some curious reversals of ranking, with little Inyo county ranking eighth, and Stanislaus in seventh position behind the larger population centers. But Orange is ahead of Stanislaus in value of foreseen delays, actual work of the building should start sometime in December.

THE TINIES

The pelican was having fun. Cried happy Duncy. "See it run, each time that Copy looks a fish. It's hungry as can be."

"And, watch the fish go out of sight. The big bird gulps them, in one bite. Why, say, if I ate fish that way, how awful sick I'd be."

"Aw, I have often seen you stuff until of food you've had enough," said Goldy, with a smile, "but there is one thing I'll admit."

"You've never eaten raw fish, son. I don't think that would be much fun. Why, even, if you tried, I'm sure you couldn't swallow it."

Then Copy said, "Hey, I'm tired out. I've fished enough, and now, no doubt, the pelican has had his fill. Much more would make him ill."

He promptly tossed his line away, as Goldy said, "Come on, let's play. I wish that I could have a ride in that bird's monstrous bill."

A laugh then came from all the crowd. "I guess that Goldy talked too loud," said Windy. "Master Pelican has flown right out of sight."

"To give more rides he didn't wish. Perhaps he is too full of fish. What say we try to find a place where we can sleep tonight?"

One of the Tinies' baker friends said, "Here's where our comradeship ends. You Tinies hike along. We're going back to where we belong."

Not far from here you'll find a tree, and in it you will plainly see a little hut. There you can sleep, and nothing will go wrong."

So, off the happy Tinies went. About a half an hour was spent in winding through the forest. Then the little hut was found.

"Climb up," cried Scouty, "and don't fall. There's room in that hut for us all. A man is in the window. Gee, a new friend has been found."

(The Tinies find another hut in the next story.)

FAMOUS FOOTBALL FEATS!

ROY RIEGELS ran in the wrong direction was a costly gallop. It happened during the Georgia Tech-California Rose Bowl game of 1929. California's drive had been checked on the 25-yard line. On the first play, Mizell of Tech fumbled. Riegels, defensive center, grabbed the ball and turned around and ran toward his own goal.

It wasn't until he was almost over his own line that Benny Lom, Bear halfback, downed him on the six-inch line.

California lined up and prepared to punt. Lom's kick was blocked by Maree, Tech right tackle. Barr fell on the ball for a safety, the margin of victory, for Tech scored in the third period and missed the kick, while California followed with a touchdown and point after.

demands MUSSOLINI

A man who is not a father is hardly a man, Il Duce says, so he increases the pressure on the bachelors and feminists in his campaign to boost Italy's population to sixty millions

By Irene di Robilant

ROME
CHILDREN are an asset . . . children are consumers . . . a man who is not a father is hardly a man . . . are among the slogans which loud speaker Mussolini is constantly broadcasting throughout Italy.

For the last three years marriage and child-bearing have been subjected to the well-known methods of high-pressure salesmanship, but while Italians seem ready to follow and obey the Duce in most things, they are showing very moderate enthusiasm as far as his prescriptions for bigger and better families are concerned.

Sixty thousand six hundred and sixty-two marriages took place during the first three months of the current year, but this apparently impressive figure shows a drop of more than 7000 from the 1933 figures for the same period, which, with the equally noticeable decline in birthrate, have induced Mussolini to intensify the marriage campaign not only by active propaganda, but by placing new and drastic restrictions on the happy state of bachelorhood.

Italy's population of 42,000,000 souls is still on the increase, but the Duce wants it to reach as high as 60,000,000 and this in the shortest possible time. Overproduction, to his mind, is the principle cause of the world's economic difficulties and an increase in population is the only real remedy.

Notwithstanding the comparative poverty of the Italian soil, it is pointed out that the nation has already produced a surplus of wheat, and that land reclamation and lower standards of living leave abundant space for a larger number of inhabitants.

The marriage booklet which has been introduced recently affords a practical illustration of Mussolini's idea. It is handed to all couples applying for a marriage license, and contains special pages in which the names of bride and groom are to be filled in, together with the date of the ceremony and the signature of the officiating priest or public officer.

THE page is duly stamped at the municipal building so as to serve as a legalized copy of the marriage certificate. It can be used for various purposes, such as passport requests, old age pensions and other occurrences in which matrimonial documents are demanded.

From the booklet the newlyweds can learn what they are entitled to in the way of legal protection and, above all, from Mussolini's quoted speech which serves as an introduction, and from the pages which follow the marriage record, they can find out what is expected of them.

Six blank spaces are provided for the prospective offsprings, and once this very conservative estimate of an "average family" is attained, a new booklet is provided. Then, if more than six children are living, the family enters the class of the "well deserving" with consequent tax reductions, insurance prizes and a free pass given to the father for use on municipal conveyances such as street cars and buses.

For every child the dates of birth, vaccination and school registry have to be entered and legalized by a public officer. At the foot of each page a quotation from the writings of famous men is offered by way of encouragement.

"The destiny of nations is dependent on the increase of the population," writes Mussolini.

Mazzini, the prophet of Italian independence, is quoted as saying that: "Family and country are the beginning and end of the same line."

Saint Augustin, Hegel, Silvio Pellico and others follow with equally inspiring words, while the last pages of the booklet are given up to the practical and even materialistic aspects of the picture.

Newlyweds are told their respective duties according to the various articles of the civil code. Italy is a man's country, and the father is the head of the family. He has the choice of residence, and his wife must follow him wherever he chooses to go, as well as love, honor and obey him. She is, however, the legal guardian of the children should her husband die or prove incapable of shouldering his responsibilities.

BOTH are responsible for the maintenance and education of children according to their means, and while the husband is required to support his wife, the latter must provide for him should he be unable to work.

While these rules are somewhat like those of other countries, the advice given to mothers for the rearing of children is typically Italian. Bottle feeding is looked upon as a crime, unless resorted to in cases of dire necessity. All forms of birth control are declared a moral as well as civil misdemeanor.

The booklet, however, is only one of the many features of the great matrimonial campaign which is sweeping Italy. Gifts consisting of money or a set of bedroom furniture are given to poor couples. Collective marriage ceremonies have been organized in Rome with each couple receiving a gift of 500 lire (about $50 at present rates of exchange) from Mussolini.

The leading Italian insurance company, which is to a great extent a state organization, has created a special policy for the use of newlyweds. The policy is given to the bridegroom on request and is exempt from payment for the first three months. Besides providing for life insurance, it has a special prize enabling the owner to cash in on half the total premium when he can demonstrate that he has six living children. He is exempt from further payment until the policy reaches its maturity, when the other half is paid.

Articles on the attractions of married life, on the citizen's obligation concerning the increase of population are constantly appearing in Mussolini's daily paper, the "Popolo d'Italia." Although most of them are unsigned, the authorship can easily be traced to the Duce's own pen.

That neighboring countries are fighting the same battle is pointed out as an indication of the real danger. Germans are alarmed at the increase of birth rate among Poles, France finds no men for her vast colonial enterprises, England may lose control of her dominions simply on account of the lack of the large families which provided the empire builders of bygone days.

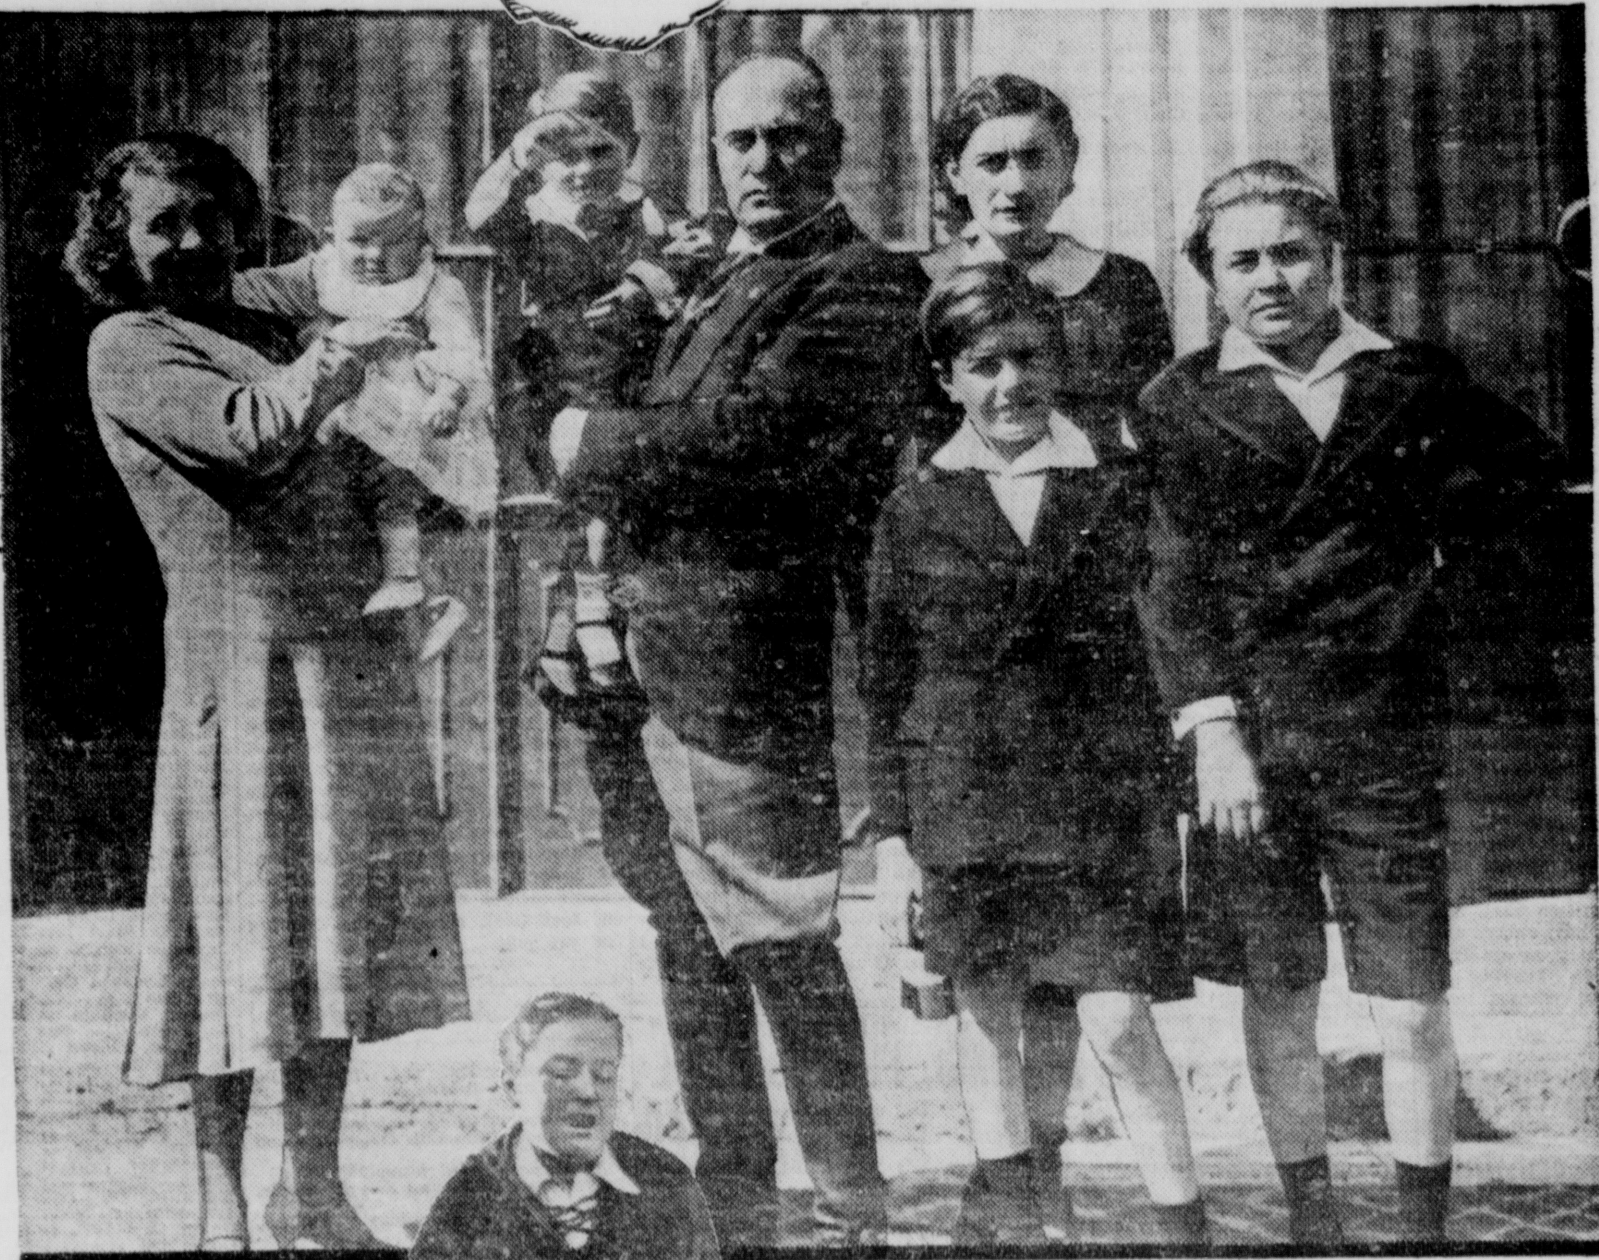

While Italians have lent a deaf ear to the state propada, everything at present seems to indicate that recent legislation will be far more effective than words in bringing about the desired results.

IN the first place, the exclusion of women from almost every form of state employment will force them back into their ancient and somewhat abandoned career of home makers. Self-supporting women are more difficult to please when it comes to matrimony. They often wed only on condition that they will not have to give up their freedom and their career, which leaves little time for a large family.

In fact, one or two children are the general

(Copyright, 1934, by EveryWeek Magazine.)

Italy's boss says six children are required to constitute an "average" family, and he expects soon to announce the arrival of another little Mussolini to round out an even half-dozen of his own.

average of married teachers, stenographers and women bank clerks, and the care of these naturally is entrusted to hired help or to the already overcrowded institutions.

Women, who are often the principal bread winners in a family and who in many branches obtain employment more easily than men, have naturally resented the restrictions placed upon them; that Mussolini is a woman hater as well as an anti-feminist is being currently said.

He has in fact often given public utterance to his distrust of women in the field of professional and intellectual work. They are consequently entirely excluded from Italian politics, and with the exception of one profession, that of midwife, they will have no showing in the organization of the Corporate State.

In the new House of Parliament the members will represent some vocational calling instead of a political section of the population. In the professions open to both men and women, only men can be appointed as delegates, so that the privilege given to midwives is due only to the fact that there are no men in that particular profession.

On the other hand, Mussolini has a married daughter, the Countess Edda Ciano, who is said to occupy the foremost place in his affections and to be the only person who has some slight influence on him. He has done his duty as a citizen by increasing his own family from the original three to five; the stork, which is at present hovering over his home in Predappio, will give him the regulation half dozen.

IN order to find favor in Il Duce's eyes, women must bear children again and again, and they must go about it cheerfully. A most cordial reception, in fact, was given to a group of "champion mothers" which came from various parts of Italy to be Mussolini's guests in Rome. Each had at least 10 living children; a peasant couple from northern Italy stood in the lead with 17.

In the congratulatory speech that Mussolini made to his guests, he observed that large families were the privilege of the working class which once more showed its strength and generosity, and which ought to be an example and inspiration to the selfish richer citizen.

Consequently, a Roman daily paper started publishing photographs of groups of children bearing well-known and even historical names. No 10-children family was found among the aristocracy, but the Princes Borghese, Chigi, Odescalchi and Ruffo made a fair showing with groups of six apiece. It was immediately noted that the publicity given to their families secured compensation in the form of honors and state appointments to quite a few aristocratic fathers who had been comparatively ignored in the heroic days of Fascism.

In answer to the accusation of being a woman hater, Mussolini has publicly said that he is rendering women the greatest possible service by making it difficult as well as unpopular for men to remain single. Just recently the existing tax on bachelors has been upped 50 per cent. Diplomats, as well as all Italian public officials, have been advised that they need not expect advancement and are even liable to dismissal if they do not marry, and in fact quite a few confirmed bachelors are known to be on the lookout for a bride.

Furthermore, Italian cities are rapidly being purified of all attractions dear to bachelors.

Bruno Mussolini, the dictator's eldest son, is no softie. At 16, he is quite an athlete, and the youngest licensed airplane pilot in all Italy. . . . The long parade of "champion mothers," shown at left, came to Rome as Mussolini's guests, for the distinction of having reared 10 or more children.

LABOR PARTY

The annual conference of the Labor party of England, convened at Southport recently, decided upon a program of action in the event of its being returned to power at the next general election. Such a return to power is quite within the realm of probability.

The bye-elections thus far held give evidence of the waning power of the present national government. The emergency which placed that government in power has passed.

England is in a better economic condition today than she has been since the close of the war. Unemployment is being reduced. The national budget has been balanced.

Old-age pensions and unemployment insurance have been accepted as a national policy by all parties. And there is a popular disposition to take a much more radical step toward socialized industry.

The two important decisions made by the conference will have a great influence upon England's future. In the first place, the conference voted that under no condition would the Labor party accept power, unless it had a clear majority to carry through its program in parliament.

Hitherto, on both occasions when the Labor party assumed power, it had to depend upon the votes of liberals to carry its measures through the parliament. This inevitably demanded compromises. Such compromises the Labor party will no longer make.

In the second place, and much more important, is the program decided upon, whether in or out of power. The Labor party is determined to socialize the great industries in the event of its gaining the support of the country.

In that respect, England is far in advance of us. Telegraph, telephone and radio are already under national control. The railroads are practically so. The next step is to nationalize industries like coal and iron and other national monopoly industries.

A heated discussion was held in the conference over the question of confiscation or compensation. The conference voted for compensation by an overwhelming vote.

This vote cushions the shock which would naturally follow if the government took over these great national industries. It is certain that England will not follow Russia in its radical and revolutionary confiscatory policy. This program of the Labor party is a repudiation of the "gradualism" policy which has hitherto obtained. It becomes an out-and-out radical party.

It will refuse to compromise in the main features of its program. That the conservative political forces in England sense the danger of a Labor government is evident from the pronouncements being made by conservative leaders.

Stanley-Baldwin has committed himself to the legislation which the Conservative party bitterly fought a decade ago. And Lord Balfour recently made the statement that the social legislation begun in the first ministry of Lloyd George has saved England from a more serious revolution.

The general election must take place within the next year and a half. It can come earlier. That will be determined by the National government now in power.

It is quite likely that in the next election the present coalition group will not hold together. In that event, probably none of the three parties will gain a complete majority. This will mean a short-lived coalition ministry, followed by another general election, or a series of general elections.

In any case, future political movements in England will be watched with interest, for what England does will have repercussions in many other democratic countries.

CHARLES FLOYD SLAIN

"Pretty Boy" Floyd has been killed by government men," it was news of widest interest yesterday, repeated by word of mouth for those who had not yet seen the papers. Most people rejoiced at this additional evidence that criminals are not finding society as "easy picking" as they did a few years ago when depredations of various kinds horrified and terrified the nation.

Along with the story of the slaying of Floyd is the story of the reaction of his mother when she heard the news. Floyd never lived to experience the heartbreak his mother has borne on his account. Probably hers is the greater punishment.

The heartbreak of fathers and mothers who are disappointed in their children as was this mother is a pain that probably beggars comparison—if a sensitive imagination tells us true.

It was inevitable that the event of yesterday would come, said this criminal's mother, who added that for months and years she has prepared herself for the shock. In an added paragraph of the interview is the pathos of the story for she said, "I have never condoned the things Charles was accused of doing. But I'll have to admit at times I tried hard to disbelieve all that has been printed about him. What mother wouldn't have tried to do the same thing?"

It is a sad world for mothers and fathers of criminals. They must face a terrible and inevitable end for their child and they must also face the bitter disappointment which comes to them through the memory of the high hopes and ambitions which they, as is the way with parents, held for their children.

Society has taken its toll. Floyd paid the price. His mother makes the greater payment and for her the pain which memory brings must be borne so long as she lives.

A VOTE FOR NUMBER TWO WOULD RETURN SALOON CONDITIONS

Number two on the ballot proposes to amend the constitution by adding to the liberties and privileges of those selling intoxicating liquor. Whereas now spirituous liquors, commonly spoken of as "hard liquor," cannot be bought except in sealed packages not to be drunk on the premises, this would permit the sale of all liquor in hotels, restaurants, public eating places and clubs.

In these places liquor cannot be drunk now except with meals, but the furnishing of meals in many of them has become nothing short of a farce and joke. If this amendment passes, every kind of liquor will be sold in the state in all of the places named, which desire to sell it, and simply adds thousands of more opportunities to get drunk quickly.

While the principal argument used against the 18th amendment was that under no circumstances would they ever permit the saloons to come back, this would bring them back in full 100 per cent order, as well as turn clubs and other places into saloons.

Since the repeal of the 18th amendment and the adoption by the state of its present alleged "liquor control act," the fruits of liquor drinking have increased accidents, deaths and damages to the state of California to a terrible degree. Not content with the conditions as bad as they are, the liquor men have drawn up this amendment, for the sake of making more money out of it, even though they must know and all others must know that this would make conditions infinitely worse.

A vote for this amendment means a vote for the return of the old liquor conditions, raised to the nth power, because now there is no restriction placed upon liquor selling in any community by the act of any governing body, not even of the people themselves. Surely the people of California and most certainly those of Orange county have seen the evils, due to this unrestricted traffic, increase too rapidly to vote for greater danger and damages upon our commonwealth.

PROPOSITION NUMBER ONE BEFORE THE VOTERS

The first act on which the voters are called to vote, number one of the ballot, is the veterans' welfare bond act.

This provides for the issuance of bonds by the state, for the raising of $30,000,000 to be loaned to those men from California who enlisted in the great war approximately 175,000 of them. This money is to be loaned for the building of homes, and is to be paid back by small payments.

In 1921 California voted $10,000,000 for loaning to the veterans and five years later added $20,000,000 to this amount, making $30,000,000 in all. This added bond issue would provide $60,000,000. The act is to be administered by the Veterans' Welfare board. This board charges the borrowers one per cent more than the state charges for the money and the expenses of the board are paid by this one per cent.

Of the amount of this thirty million dollars that has been loaned the veterans, there has been paid back more than ten million, and in addition, there has been over eleven million dollars paid back in interest.

The Welfare board has on file over 20,000 petitions for loans. It is noticeable, in the way this work has been carried on, there has been no real cost to the state, as the interest charges and principal payments have been kept up in the aggregate.

It is a wonderful help to those who are trying to buy and pay for a home. The principle embodied in this would be well if applied not only to veterans, but applied to all worthy citizens who desire to establish homes of their own.

Undoubtedly, the people will vote "Yes" up on this issue.

Frontiers and Drawbridges

Christian Science Monitor

"It is not my business as president of the Disarmament Conference to change frontiers. It is my business, if I can, to persuade people to abolish frontiers altogether." When Mr. Arthur Henderson said this at the recent annual British Labor Party conference, he was referring to a complaint made in France that he had not aligned himself with Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Britain's Acting Prime Minister, in declaring the United Kingdom's frontier to be now on the Rhine instead of on the English Channel.

Mr. Henderson here put his finger upon a basic fact. International difficulties exist today partly because it is not yet realized that frontiers have become as out-of-date as medieval castle moats and drawbridges. Frontiers, like drawbridges, are of use chiefly where the people on one side of them do not wish well to those on the other. That is a state of things which, if it has not altogether ended, is at least in the process of passing away.

Today the only frontier worth having is one of good will. Without good will the strongest fortress is only a shell trap.

The Boy King

The Oakland Tribune

They crowned a new king over in Yugoslavia this week, doing so because it is traditional that kings wear crowns and that sons of kings ascend the throne when their fathers die.

To great ceremony a small boy became king Peter II and dignified old men, with some physical discomfort, knelt to pledge him their loyalty. There were many uniforms present and, of course, the occasion was impressive.

Everyone in the crowd who applauded the new king, knew well that he cannot rule his country for some years to come; that he is just a little boy dressed up as a symbol; and that all the flub-dub and all the ceremony were to perpetuate that which has come down through the years.

There are few adult kings in the world who have much to do with the ruling of their countries. King Peter II joins their ranks young enough to escape many of the embarrassments which come to "rulers" who are not allowed to rule.

DEBUNKING THE CHICKADEE

I know you're blithe and cheery,
Though somewhat weak in song.
Chill winds, I know,
Are going to blow
Before so very long.
But you will never feel them;
When winter tempests roar
You'll pipe your lay
Far far away
Beside some southern shore.

Unlike the wrens and robins
You flutter far and near
And chirp at me
From yonder trees
Till Indian summer's here.
October skies are pleasant
As very well you ken,
But when it's gone
You'll wander on
And not come back again.

You doubtless think you're daring
Because you stay alone
And fling at me
Your "Chickadee!"
When other birds have flown.
But you are only cunning,
You stick around to find
The swarms of bugs and gnats and slugs
The others leave behind.

Thoughts On Modern Life

BY GLEN FRANK

THE GHOST OF PRICE CONTROL

The Roosevelt administration will, in my judgment, be compelled, sooner or later, to reverse itself on the policies it has been pursuing for the political manipulation of prices.

It has relied too much upon an artificial manipulation of the price level as a means of national recovery.

I think that, in doing this, the cart has been put before the horse.

As I pointed out some months ago, the price level has been lifted mainly as a result of two things, viz:

(1) Production costs have been pushed up by various code provisions.

(2) There has been a deliberate restriction of output.
Events will in time convince even the most theoretical of the economists that rising prices should be regarded as results rather than as causes of business recovery.

We cannot permanently maintain a high price level and a low output—a deliberately restricted output.

But, whatever the soundest price theory may be, the current fact is that the artificial boosting of prices has hit the consumer hard.

Not even the most liberal interpretation of the wage and price statistics can deny that the purchasing power of the average consumer has relatively declined under the price manipulation policy—that is to say, dollar for dollar his income buys less.

The brave and necessary effort to bring the level of farm prices closer to the level of industrial prices has not succeeded primarily because the policy of trying artificially to manipulate the price level, the monetary policy, the AAA, and the NRA has boosted all prices and thus left the gap between agricultural and industrial prices still gaping.

Because this business of prices is vital to the whole recovery effort, I shall return to it tomorrow. (Copyright, 1934 McClure Newspr. Syn.)

INCONSIDERATE SAM

"I'd ask Mary to come and spend the month with us if it were not for that young hoodlum. He's the most inconsiderate young boor I have seen in many a day. He has to be served first and best. I can't see why Mary, of all people, should have such a child as hers. She is the soul of consideration."

Let us see why Mary had such an inconsiderate son as Sam. It is the last few minutes before dinner is served. Mother is going back and forth between the kitchen and dining room carrying dishes, filling glasses and the like. Sam is lying on his back before the fire reading. Grandma speaks up: "Sam, why don't you get up and give your mother a hand?"

Sam looks over the edge of his book and his mother says hastily, "O, no, no, I'm just about through. Don't disturb him." Sam drops his eyes back to his book and grandma silently twists her handkerchief between her fingers.

At the table Sam speaks up, "Remember I don't like fat, ma, and give me the outside piece." Grandma frowns and says, "Your mother likes the outside, too, Sam."

"Oh, I really don't mind. Here you are, Sam," and Sam has the whole of the crusty brown portion.

After dinner mother enters the living room and looks about for something. "What is it you want, Mary," asks grandma. "The book I was reading. I thought I left it here on the table by my chair."

"I'm reading it, ma. I'll be finished with it by and by," says Sam from the depths of the couch. "That's all right, Sam. I'll rest my eyes a bit. They're tired anyway," says mother. Sam did not even hear her, buried in the story to his ears.

That evening grandma ventured to say to Mary, "You know, dear, I'm afraid that you are making Sam very selfish. He doesn't give your comfort a thought. He thinks about nobody but himself and it looks to me that you have encouraged him in doing just that. Why don't you teach him to help you, to wait on you, think about other people a little? It would be better for him and for you."

"O, Sam is only a child. And he has lost his father. I must make up to him somehow. I'd rather do things myself than have him put out of his way. Really I would. I like to do things for him."

Most people like to do things for children and they keep on doing them long past the time when they should have stopped. Children are not born with consideration for their elders. They know nothing about cooperation. They must learn by experience and home is the place and mother and father are the teachers.

Look about you. Which children live the happier, richer lives? Those who are waited on like helpless beings or those who wait upon others? Those who think only of their own comfort or those who consider father and mother and friends? When you serve children when they might better serve you the children are cheated. Service enriches the spirit but being served beyond necessity kills it.
